experience the possibilities

Step into the Perimeters showroom and experience the luxury of being able to design your home just the way you always wanted. The possibilities begin with an incredible selection of Marvin custom windows displayed in elegant room settings throughout the showroom. An array of handcrafted doors, cabinetry, countertops, hardware, molding and finishes will demonstrate the potential for creating rooms of distinction in your home.

Our professional staff will help you with your selections, and our experienced design team, working with computer generated floor plans and 3-D color perspective views, can seamlessly incorporate every lifestyle and design choice, to create a home that is distinctly yours.

So, whether it's Marvin windows custom-fit to the special sizes and shapes you've chosen for your home, or the other design treatments that you know will make all the difference, Perimeters lets you experience all the possibilities that can turn your home into a showcase of style and taste. And it all begins when you step inside.

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

The Down Factory Store

"Fall" Extravaganza

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

"We go the distance for you."

Overestimating Americans

The Story Of Dumb Humans and The Recall Of All Segways Sold In The World

By Dan Rattiner

The vehicle that was supposed to revolutionize transportation, the Segway, has been recalled. Under certain circumstances, people who are riding them can fall off. It has happened three times since it was introduced with such great fanfare a year ago. One of the times, the person who fell off required head stitches, and the fall seemed to be the fault of the Segway. That was enough.

If you are unfamiliar with the Segway — and there seems to be just two of them on the East End, one owned privately in Bridgehampton and the other owned by the East Hampton Town Police who use it for traffic control — it is an odd-looking thing with two wheels, a platform between them and a stalk in the middle sticking up with handlebars on the end. It looks like a lawnmower. Except that, when you hop onto the platform and lean forward it goes forward and when you pull on the handlebars or turn the handlebars it slows, stops and goes backward or turns to the left or the right. Top speed is 12 miles an hour. It weighs 82 pounds. And it needs curb ramps when you use it on the public sidewalk, just as motorized wheelchairs do. It also costs $4,900.00.

I think the nature of this recall is very widely misunderstood. Considering all the hoopla when this thing was introduced a year ago, and considering that only a pitiful 6,000 of them have been sold during the past year, there was a lot of "see, I told you it was unsafe" talk. People don't quite understand how it stays up when you get on it (it uses gyroscopes), or what makes it go (rechargeable batteries), and when they are told that is what it is, they don't quite believe it. Cars are just fine, thank you.

Indeed, the Segway has yet to find its place in the scheme of things. It really is the perfect urban vehicle. It goes about ten hours before it has to be recharged (with a common vacuum cleaner AC cord), and people who have used it say it really seems to react to you, like a partner or friend, in a safe, athletic way, with you making just a few motions with your hands and body and with the Segway doing all the work.

So what's the problem? The problem is that the people who make the Segway, a firm put together by inventor Dean Kamen up in Manchester, New Hampshire, that was bankrolled with $100 million in investment money, made the mistake of overestimating human beings.

The problem comes up when the Segway's battery gets low. At first, you can see the needle going into the red area in the gauge built prominently into the handlebars. If you do nothing about it for awhile, a little danger light goes on, and if you do nothing about that, after awhile an alarm begins to sound every ten seconds, and if you do nothing

South O' the Highway (and the North too)

Edie Brickell released a long awaited CD this week, Volcano, her first record in ten years. Ms. Brickell and her husband, Paul Simon, make beautiful music together in their home in Montauk.

Robin Leach and Kimora Lee Simmons of East Hampton were in the Grill Room at the Four Seasons in New York last week to shoot Life of Luxury for ABC.

Presidential contender Dr. Howard Dean, originally from East Hampton, may be the first Democratic to choose not to use public funding for his campaign. While preparing petitions for the North Carolina primary the former Governor of Vermont said that he's keeping his options open. Spending is limited to $45 million for next year's primaries for candidates who accept public money.

Kim Cattrall of East Hampton stays so slim by power walking more and staying on Dr. Oz Garcia's food plan, with a few tasty exceptions. Her neighbor, P. Diddy, works with a trainer to prepare for the New York City Marathon next month, running four six-milers and one long run each week. He's lost ten pounds, and his very large bodyguards can't keep up. about that, sometime after that the handlebars begin to shake. Now, all this is explained in the thin manual that comes with the Segway, which you are supposed to read. The problem is that nobody reads it. And after the handlebars begin to shake, the rider starts to think well, if I continue to do nothing, what will happen after that?

Nobody at Segway apparently considered that anybody would be so stupid as to ignore all the warnings. They had run out of warnings. Something is going to go wrong. Get it? So I am curious to see what is going to go wrong, the riders said.

Finally, without enough juice in the battery to properly power all the different aspects of this invention — it took Kamen nine YEARS to perfect this thing — it begins to fail by failing to properly right itself under stressful circumstances. If you slow down, and you see a bump, and you lean forward to give it power to speed it up to kind of get over the bump cowboy style, the Segway tends to tip forward and, if you are not careful, you fall off.

How stupid can people be? Well, the people up in New Hampshire have thought about it and they have developed a software upgrade for it. With the upgrade, the following happens.

The little warning light goes on, the alarm sounds, and then, before the handlebars begin to shake, the Segway begins to go slower and slower. It just doesn't have its usual pep anymore, or so it seems. Then, not only do the handlebars shake, but the entire vehicle shakes. And after that, it beeps loudly for about a minute — almost a groan to tell you to get off — and then, wherever it is, it gently works its way down through a series of slow motion routines — all still in full control of itself — and then it stops entirely. And that's it. It's dead. And like a bicycle it simply leans over sideways and, instinctively, because the self-preservation instinct works unconsciously, you step off it.

After that, you have to push it. Or pick it up — at 82 pounds, it probably requires two people — and put it into the trunk of your car with the handlebars sticking out to take it somewhere where they have an AC outlet. You won't do that again.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission, working closely with the people at Segway, is fully satisfied with this solution. Segway is opening 11 upgrade centers around the country where you can come in and they will install the new software chip for free. Or, you can ship your Segway (on a gurney? in a coffin?) to Manchester and they will fix it and reimburse you for the shipping. Or, you can call the company and have a doctor come to your home to do the upgrade. $100 million goes a long way.

Probably the most famous person to fall off a Segway was President Bush, who had one delivered to his summer home in Kennebunkport, Maine, and as is his usual procedure, jumped into the situation feet first, without thinking. As he had forgotten to turn it on, he fell right off again.

Segway says the largest order they have gotten for their product has come from the City of Paris, which rents the scooters out to subway passengers leaving Metro stations. They use them to get home and then return them in the morning on their way to work again. It's been a hit. Other Segways have been sold to the New York City police department, the U.S. Post Office mail carriers and the Seattle water meter readers. Still, after $100 million, just these 6,000 machines in total are not much of a return on investment. Among those who have made major investments in Segway have been Steve Jobs from Apple Computer and venture capitalist John Doerr whose firm Kleiner Perkins Caulfield has put in $38 million.

Still, I wonder if Segway will ever work. Besides the fact that at 82 pounds, you wouldn't want to be driving when one of them hits somebody on the sidewalk.

Also I wondered, thinking about how the Segway is so twenty second century, why they just didn't do the recall by sending out a high pitched whistle from Manchester, so high that it could only be heard by the Segway itself. Upon hearing it, Segway would chirp happily, and, at 12 miles an hour, travel back to the factory in New Hampshire, clogging the highways and sidewalks around the country, as it heads in to be fitted with its new computer chip.

You'll never get me on one of these things.

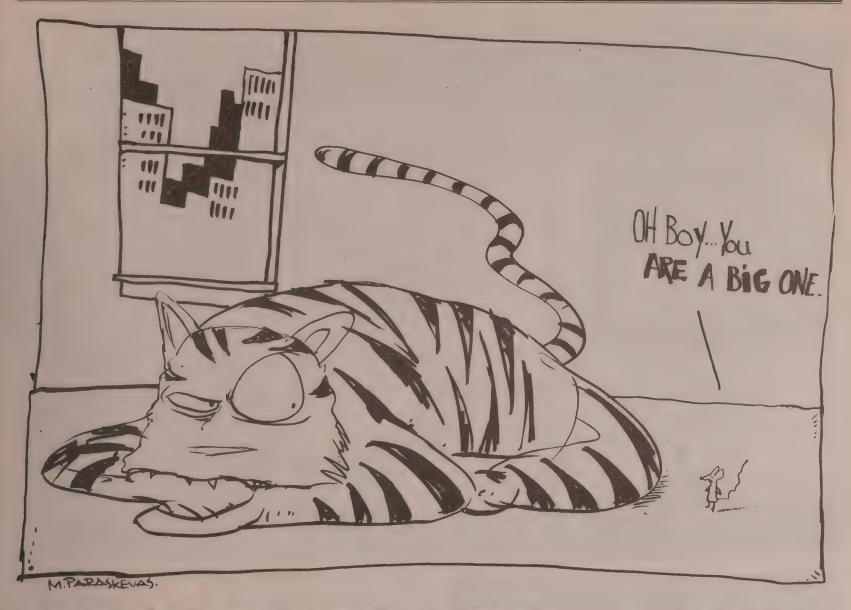

Wild In The Hamptons

Tigers, Bores, Alligators, Teenagers, Surfcasters And Other Dangers

By Dan Rattiner

As I am sure you are aware by now, a man in New York City has been arrested for keeping a 400-pound Bengal tiger as a pet in his apartment. He also had a 100-pound alligator there, which apparently was kept in a different bedroom from the tiger. The man who kept these animals, Antoine Yates, was arrested because he went to an emergency room to get treated for scratches on his arm that he said had been come from a dog. No dog makes marks like this. The doctors called the police, the police arrested Mr. Yates. Then they went to the apartment armed to the teeth and had a sharp shooter fire anesthetizing darts into the sides of the tiger and the alligator. Both are now at pet farms in the Midwest, pending release somewhere into the "wild." I wonder where the "wild" is. I also wonder how they got a 400-pound unconscious tiger down four flights of stairs. Antoine Yates lived in a walkup. Probably got piano movers.

Here in the Hamptons, you might like to know, there are also people who harbor dangerous animals in their homes. They are few and far between, of course. But we have done

I also wonder how they got a 400-pound unconscious tiger down a survey and this is what they are. If you come across somebody who is harboring one of these in their home, call the authorities immediately.

four flights of stairs.

1. Teenagers. About twenty percent of all homes in the Hamptons have them. These creatures stay up to all hours of the night playing loud music and talking on cell phones. Their rooms are a disgusting mess. They roam the neighborhoods in packs. (Identifying cry: "Dude!")

2. Surfcasters. Homes harboring these creatures often have old Jeeps with beach stickers on them parked in their driveways. Inside, during the wintertime, surfcasters hibernate. In the spring they awaken and on unpredictable occasions, embark en masse for the beach in their Jeeps. It is some kind of migration frenzy. There they congregate in a long line and throw strings attached to sticks into the ocean.

(Identifying cry: "They're Running!")

3. The Entitled. The Entitled can be found in about ten percent of the large homes built oceanfront or just back from the ocean. They are loud, aggressive and mostly Alpha Males. Stay clear of them. If you get too near, they will take over your life, tell you to do something for them, and although they will pay you well, they will expect it to be done yesterday. (Identifying cry: "Hey You!")

4. Bores. Bores drone on endlessly, telling long stories about how things used to be, often stories they have forgotten they have already told, to people they have forgotten they have told them to. Try to get away from a bore and you will be regaled with "one last thing..." Bores can also put you to sleep. After that, whatever it is, it's painless but you may never know what hit you. There are reports of people meeting up with a bore and then never being seen again. (Identifying cry: "That reminds me.")

6. Adorers. Armed with photographs and autograph books, adorers roam the streets of the East End looking for famous people they can annoy. More of an annoyance than a danger, adorers will wait endlessly outside some of the more upscale stores in the community waiting for a particular person they think is in there to come out. (Identifying cry:

Maybe the best thing is to just stay home, and not have to meet up with these creatures in other people's homes.

Too Thin

The Epidemic Of Fat In America May Just Be A Return To Normal

By Dan Rattiner

I went to California last week for a vacation. I was up in Eureka near Oregon, I was in Sacramento, I was in San Francisco and I was down in L. A. It is just shocking how fat people are. Oh, there are thin people, of course, and there are people so overweight they can hardly move, but on average, it is so very noticeable how people are fatter than they were just a generation ago.

Why I had to leave the Hamptons to really notice this, I do not know. People seem to be pretty average out where we are, and not much different than a generation ago. Maybe I'm just used to everybody. Or maybe people are just so chic in the Hamptons. I did not see many fat people, men or women, on Rodeo Drive either.

Up in Eureka, sitting at the next table in a restaurant there was a very beautiful woman.

But when she got up, there was the fat rest of her. And I thought, maybe we are all just looking at this wrong. If a generation ago, Americans were so thin, two generations ago people were fat. And before that they were fat. And before that they were fat.

Think about it. Mrs. George Washington was a chub. Benjamin Franklin had an ample gut. One of the great fatties back then - he even (continued on next page)

BEST HALLOWEEN COSTUME WINS A PRIZE

Dan's Papers Presents "Dracula" At Guild Hall in East Hampton-Watch It In Costume

By Lise Visser

Wear a costume and you might win a prize from Dan Rattiner this Sunday, October 19, during Dan's Papers Night at the John Drew Theatre at Guild Hall in East Hampton when Spindletop Productions presents the final performance of Bram Stoker's Dracula at 7:00 p.m. The Best Costume wins the Grand Prize.

This well-received thriller, replete with many surprises, blends stage magic and illusion to the delight of young and old. The legend of the mesmerizing monster has fascinated audiences for decades. In fact, Dracula, written in 1897, has never been out of print and it is the biggest selling novel of all time. The only book that has sold more copies is The Bible, but of course, that's not a novel.

This is a great time of year to have some fun with Dracula.

Spindletop's Jonathan Peters promises a rousing "razzle dazzle" with chills up the spine.

Remember, wear your costumes and your garlic jewelry (anyone who balks at garlic is sus> pect) and have your two index fingers at the ready, just in case you need to cross 'em in front of you. If, on the way to the theatre, the horses whinny and tear at their tethers, look for lurking figures because there's a lot at stake here. Tix - 866-811-4111

became President in his rotund state — was William Howard Taft.

Maybe this thing is upside down. Maybe since the first man stood upright on his hind legs in caveman times, people were overweight by our standards. As a matter of fact, we really don't know if they were overweight or not because there are no records of it. But if you look at sketches made of cave people several generations ago, they were portrayed stocky and ample. They'd kill something, cook it up, fat and all, and eat it. What did they know? Only recently have sketches of cave people shown them thin and buff. I doubt very much they were thin and buff. I doubt that cave people ever went out into the park or out onto the street and jogged for miles and miles to get the weight off as some determined people do

Look at other times in history when we do have records of what people looked like. In the Middle Ages, we have all these great oil paintings that are truly lifelike and no doubt accurate resemblances of the people they portray. We have a whole lot of people very overweight in these paintings, and only a few that are thin. We have many oil paintings of nudes. We look at them today and we say, oh, that was the fashion of the times to be so tubby. I say it was not the fashion of the times to be tubby. It was what people looked like without any clothes on.

If there is any truth to the above, then you have to look to the cause as Fast Food. Today you get in your car, and everywhere you go there is a Wendy's or a Pizza Hut or a Taco Bell. Good tasty food is everywhere, and to get it, all you have to do is put on your turn signal and get in line.

Work by Botero

In ancient times, and right up until about two generations ago, there was also fast food. It wasn't exactly in-your-face, everywhere-you-look-outside-the-windshield fast food. But it was out there in the woods. You'd get hungry. You'd go out with some sort of food obtaining device — a rifle or a spear or a hatchet — and you'd get it and stuff yourself with it right on the spot. And you'd eat as much of it as you could because who knew when the next food would come along? Or if it came along if you could catch it?

The thing is, beginning around 1940 in America, it began to become fashionable to be thin. An ample girth no longer meant Well Fed. So we gave up eating, which was pretty easy to do. A war was on. And the food was pretty boring anyway. Mashed potatoes and meatloaf. You'd drive around and places to eat would not be all over the place. They'd be few and far between, in fact. Also, people no longer just got hungry and then went off to eat whatever time it was, because of the necessary routines of the war effort. People developed regular hours for eating. Eight for breakfast, noon for lunch, six for dinner. In between one didn't eat. One admired oneself in the mirror. And one listened to your mother, who said, don't eat those cookies. It's just before dinner. You can have them for dessert.

Today, like the cave people, we eat whenever we want. We eat standing up, we eat while driving in our cars, and we eat while walking along the street. It's normal. You don't find squirrels saying don't eat that, wait until dinnertime. The short thirty-year span between 1940 and 1970 when set mealtimes were in flower was an aberration. It was a matter of boring food and no fast food. We have now returned to the normalcy of the way it was, and the way it is meant to be. Fat.

I think.

Let The Bidding Begin

80 Families Hold The Key To The Formation Of Dunehampton And Sagaponack

By Dan Rattiner

Some residents of Sagaponack filed petition papers for incorporation with the Town of Southampton last week. If they are successful, and if state requirements are subsequently met, there will be a new Village of Sagaponack on the East End nestled between the Village of East Hampton and the Hamlet of Bridgehampton. All three would be bordered on one side by the ocean.

That Sagaponack has now filed papers to incorporate however, could make about 80 Sagaponack families with oceanfront homes extremely rich, on top of the fact that they already are. The reason is that part of the proposed Village of Sagaponack overlaps another proposed Village, the Village of Dunehampton. And both proposed villages need to have 500 residents in them to be approved, a number that might just barely be reached by each of them. The proponents of both Dunehampton and Sagaponack must now reach out and try to persuade those in this overlap to choose them.

There is a considerable difference between the Sagaponack and Dunehampton proposals, other than the overlap. Sagaponack encompasses the Sagaponack School district and stretches three miles back from the beach. Dunehampton is seven miles of oceanfront homes long and just one or two hundred yards wide. It is an artificially created political entity that basically shears off the oceanfront edge from the historic communities of Southampton known as Water Mill, Bridgehampton, Mecox and Sagaponack. And it was proposed because some of these oceanfront home owners are unhappy with some new Town laws that could limit sand dune restoration, and they want to shear off the rest of the town from the process. They filed papers four months ago. So far, Dunehampton has failed to show the minimum 500 residents necessary to bring the matter to a vote.

PARRISH ART MUSEUM WILL MOVE BUT STAY

By Lise Visser

The Trustees of the Parrish Art Museum voted October 8 to construct an 80,000 square foot, state of the art facility on 9.6 acres at LIU Southampton College on Montauk Highway. Outdoor sculptures will engage the attention of passersby on the hill overlooking the Atlantic

The museum's existing facility on Job's Lane, owned by Southampton Village, will continue in the tradition of founder Samuel Parrish, preserving the historic architecture with the grounds left undisturbed. The historic former library building, owned by the Parrish Museum, will remain the Carol Petrie Center for Education, used by students and the community. More of the museum's permanent collection of Italian Renaissance paintings and classical statuary will be on display.

Members of the Parrish Board and staff joined LIU officials and Trustees on Saturday morning at a press conference to announce their new partnership, which is envisioned as a cultural and educational legacy for generations to come. Space is planned in the new facility for films, lectures and presentations in a 250-seat auditorium. Classrooms for teacher training and children's and adult courses will be included, with a gift shop and café overlooking Shinnecock Bay.

Parrish Director Trudy Kramer noted that the new building will include necessary enhancements to preserve and exhibit the collection of 19th, 20th and 21st Century work

Since the residents of these 80 homes are crucial to the efforts of the proposed Village of Sagaponack and Dunehampton, I thought it might be important to see which way these oceanfront homeowners might vote. The first call I made was to the resident of a home on Daniel's Lane. A man answered, who said he lived there alone, and he would talk to me but only if I would not use his name. I agreed to these terms.

"I'm leaving for Hawaii tomorrow morning," he told me. "The whole trip is being paid for by the Dunehampton people.'

"Surely you can afford it," I said.

"Of course I can, but if these people want to lay all this stuff on me, I'm happy to take it."

"What stuff?"

"They are offering me a substantial signing bonus. I am not at liberty to reveal the amount. But shall we say, it is in seven figures. They've told me to go away on this trip to think about it. They're also buying me a new Ferrari to get me to the airport."

"Isn't this bribery?"

"I don't think so. Baseball players get signing bonuses. And I haven't signed, so I haven't got it yet. And people give other people gifts all the time. No harm in that."

"What has Sagaponack offered?"

"They've talked about a clothing line, some commercial endorsements. The rest I think I better not tell you. I haven't made up my mind

I thanked him for talking to me and made calls to two other oceanfront residences. At one, I was told by a woman that I should "talk to her agent." She gave me the name and phone number. At the other, a man told me "I ain't talking to you until you put some money on the table.

On Monday, I spoke to a spokesman for Southampton Town and told him what I had learned. I asked if it were true that you had to choose either one proposal or the other. He said that was the truth, in a kind of convoluted way. The requirement was that you be a resident of Southampton Town. If both proposals moved forward at the same time, which these were, and you chose to be in one of them, then you would be a resident of that, so your vote for the other would be ineligible.

"What if you just plain wanted to be a resident of a Village and you didn't care what it was?" I asked.

"I have absolutely no idea," he said.

As we go to press, we have learned that petitions are being created to form three more villages. The residents preparing them are from Bridgehampton, Mecox and Water Mill

It would seem that if Dunehampton were only pitted against Sagaponack, they would probably prevail. People owning oceanfront homes have tons of money compared to those who live back from the beach. In the end, they could win the battle for those overlapping votes. But if you add the weight of the Southampton residents from Bridgehampton, Sagaponack, Mecox and Water Mill, all fighting separate battles, the balance tips the other way. In the end, the 500 or so legitimate residents of the proposed Dunehampton would bankrupt themselves trying to outbid the 5,000 or so residents of the four combined com-

Then the Dunehampton residents would have to sell their homes at fire sale prices, and the residents of Bridgehampton, Sagaponack, Mecox and Water Mill could snap them up. After that, the people who proposed Dunehampton would move away to the Poor House, and the petitions of those four hamlets, which had only been put forward to stop Dunehampton from cutting out their rights to the beach, would be withdrawn. Who thought this up? Genius, if you ask me.

with galleries dedicated to Fairfield Porter, William Merritt Chase, the Abstract Expressionists, and Pop and Minimalist artists. The works of Theodore Robinson and Abstract Expressionist John Graham, who lived in Southampton for eight years, will be among those featured.

The new facilities will also allow sharing of collections from other sources. Due to lack of climate control and other aspects of the Job's Lane site, opportunities to borrow artwork for exhibition have been limited up until now, compromising the museum's accreditation.

Philanthropist and Parrish co-chair Fiona Druckenmiller, who also serves on the Board of the American Museum of Natural History, discussed the "long term benefits" and underscored that the focus of the improvements will rest on both the historical building and its assets, as well as the new facility and its potential. "The growth of both institutions, with their distinct identities and their vision for the future, will be far reaching, bringing wonderful opportunities to this area and the entire region."

At the meeting, Parrish Curator of Art Alicia Longwell provided some historical insight into the importance of art on the East End. She lectured on Samuel Parrish's original desire to put "art and people together" and his contributions as early as 1897. Prior to this, the Long Island Rail Road enabled artists to reach Sag Harbor, Bridgehampton and Greenport, on the North Fork, and paint en plein air. This began the long tradition of artists finding their inspiration in the natural

Shinnecocks Hold Ceremony At Newly Found Indian Graves On Shelter Island

By Jerry Cimisi

It was news that reached far beyond the confines of Shelter Island. Last week, Shelter Island

Police Officer Walter Richards, who owns a home on Osprey Lane, was in the process of excavating land to build a barn adjacent to his home. He saw bones sticking out of the earth.

Shelter Island Police Chief James Read said, "He found them on the 6th — that was Sunday. He brought the bones in to me. First, he thought they were animal bones until he saw a human jawbone. The next day we called the Suffolk County Medical Examiner's office. At first they said to bring in whatever bones we could find. They didn't think — and neither did we — that there was a lot more to it."

In fact five bodies discovered. "For the most part they were full skeletons," said Chief Read.

The bones were not of recent origin.

Victor H. Stephan, an anthropologist from the county, determined that what Richards had uncovered was an Indian burial ground.

"The skeletons were close together," said Read.

"Each one was folded in half." This fetal position, facing west, was a common Indian practice.

Elizabeth Haile, of the Shinnecock Nation said,

"Dr. Stephan called the Albany office of Parks and Historical Preservation and was told that the Shinnecocks were the Indians closest to that burial ground." It is most likely that the bones found on Shelter Island are the remains of Manhanset Indians, whose history on Shelter Island goes back at least 4,000 years. The name of Shelter Island, in fact, comes from an Indian word meaning "island that is sheltered by other islands."

Ms. Haile added, "There is no state law regarding the remains of Indians in unmarked graves; it is the responsibility and decision of the owner of the property. In this case Walter Richards and his wife Susanne felt it was up to us to make a decision. There is a federal repatriation law that says that the remains of Native Americans have to be sent back to their nation of origin, though because the Shinnecocks aren't federally recognized yet, that doesn't apply in this case. The Richards left it up to us and we didn't want the graves moved; these people should stay where they were buried.

"There were pieces of bones that had been collected for further testing and study. We were OK with that," she went on.

On Thursday, October 9, the Shinnecocks held a ceremony at the site. Elizabeth Haile said, "We placed a red flannel blanket on the area that had been disturbed and placed sage and sweetgrass on the blanket. That's a traditional thing that shows that our people will care for our own. The ceremony is a physical symbol of the spiritual.

"The owners are lovely people. They are leaving the site just as it is. There will be no building there. This is a sacred site and will be treated as any other cemetery. We would, however, like further archeological work done to determine just how large this burial area is. That's the thing on Long Island: unless it is the law of the town, most people when they build don't have an archeological survey done."

Ms. Haile related it was the practice of Long Island Indians to bury their dead on hills or create mounds for burials. "A higher place was considered more spiritual. That was the case here. Mr. Richards wanted to put a barn on a small hill that overlooked a pasture. The fact that our people buried their dead on hills or mounds makes us very concerned about the increased development these past years in Shinnecock Hills."

The discovery of the Indian graves seemed to come at a significant time. Currently the Shinnecocks, who are recognized by New York State as a tribe, are pushing for federal recognition. On Sunday, October 12 — yes, Columbus Day — about 1000 people marched from the Shinnecock Indian reservation to an area of land they own west of Shinnecock Canal.

"October 12 is the International day of Solidarity With Indigenous People," said Ms.

Haile. "There were individuals from other tribes who joined us, such as the Narragansetts from Rhode Island. We have a close fellowship with New England Indians — our language is practically the same."

As has also been in the news of late, the Shinnecock-owned land in Hampton Bays (about 80 acres) may be the site of a casino if the tribe gets federal recognition. This plan has stirred a great deal of controversy on the east end.

At any rate, what ever happened to the Manhansett Indians? Apparently it was a case of: "There goes the neighborhood."

Shelter Island Historian Louise Green said, "The Manhansets began to leave as more whites moved to Shelter Island. By the early 1800s they had dispersed, going to live with the Shinnecocks or the Montauks."

There is debate among Long Island historians about the whole nature of Tribes and places. More recent scholars say that names of Indians such as the Shinnecock and Corchaug are not distinct tribes but rather places where Indians lived, and that Indians were linked in one loose network of kinship. In communication with whites, Indians were referring to the places where they lived, not separate tribal names

"The Indians on Long Island spoke a common language, said Ms. Green. "They were all related. At one time in the mid-1600s four chiefs on Long Island — including the Montauks, Shinnecocks and Manhansets on Shelter Island — were brothers."

She pointed out that "Manhanset" should not be confused with "Manhasset," now the name of a town in Nassau County.

The first European settler on Shelter Island was Nathaniel Sylvester, a sugar merchant. He had married sixteen year-old Grissell Brinley in England; they had sailed for Connecticut, then eventually went south to Shelter Island. They were Quakers, seeking a refuge from persecution. In 1652 the Manhanset Indians conveyed the deed for Shelter Island to Sylvester, who passed it on to his five sons at his death in 1680.

There is no grave to mark where Sylvester is buried. In fact, there are no marked graves on Shelter Island prior to 1729.

Louise Green related that there have been Indian burial places discovered before on Shelter Island, though not for some time. "Probably the last regular burial mound discovered was in the 1850s. There are three that are known on the island. Then there was a mass burial grave unearthed from the 1920-40s.

"A regular burial mound is for a specific person, buried with artifacts. A mass grave has several persons, as a result of a number of people dying at one time, such as from an epidemic or poisoning. From the 1920-40s an archeologist from Orient, Roy Latham, unearthed remains from a mass burial at Smith Cove. Most of those remains are now at the Indian Museum in Southold."

This newly discovered find on Shelter Island may be explored further. Elizabeth Haile said the Shinnecocks would like to get an archeologist experienced in such matters — specifically she mentioned Dr. David Bernstein at Stony Brook — to determine the full extent of the burial site.

By Dan Rattiner

Alec Baldwin was born and raised in Massapequa, the oldest of the six children of Alexander Baldwin and his wife, Carol. Alexander Baldwin was a teacher at Massapequa High School and, among other things, was the Physical Education teacher. He raised all of his children, four sons and two daughters, with love, respect and discipline. He went out of his way, for example, to make sure none of his children was given special treatment at Massapequa High because of who their father was.

"I remember Dad used to take us clamming in Great South Bay," said Alex. "I was about eight years old when we first went. I remember that I wore sneakers. We had a peach basket that we put in an inner tube, and we dug for clams. My father would explain to us the different sizes, the chowder clams, the half shells and the baking clams which were so big we had to cut them up. The ones we found we put in the basket."

Baldwin also remembers his first trip out to eastern Long Island as a child. "It was to Montauk. We had lunch at Gosman's and we went out with a friend of my father's who had a small, thirty-foot fishing boat. We also went surfcasting."

Just about everyone is familiar with the fact that the four Baldwin boys subsequently went into acting. Alec has received Tony nominations, Obie awards, Golden Globe and Emmy nominations. He was the first of the brothers to become an actor, but it was not a straight line towards his destiny.

"I had decided I wanted to be a lawyer," Alec said. "I was at George Washington University studying pre-law. I was in my third year. I came up to New York to visit a friend in Manhattan at NYU. She was in the acting program and she said, 'You should consider it.' I went down and looked it over and I thought, "This is the most exciting thing I've seen and I want to do this'. So I told my parents I would leave pre-law and become an actor."

"How did they take it?" I asked.
"Dad thought it was wild. He said, 'Well, you only live once.'
Mom flipped out."

"But you did it," I said. "Did you set up any kind of time frame about how long you would try it? I mean, it's not the easiest profession."

"I thought I would give it a year," said Baldwin. "The course I took at New York University was at the undergraduate school of drama at the Lee Strasberg Institute. I'd go to school and complete the program, and a year after that I would either have a sign that I was going to be successful or I would give it up."

"And...?"

"I was a waiter at a private club. It was the Rooftop Club at 30 Lincoln Plaza. One day, a guest of one of the members was having lunch there, and she came over to me and said she was a casting director and did I want to be in a television show. And that was my first break."

The television show was the NBC daytime soap opera, The Doctors. He was in it for several years. This was in mid-1970s. He then starred in several TV programs: the NBC miniseries Dress Grey and CBS' Knot's Landing. This was in 1979.

During this time, Baldwin also studied acting under Miro Rostoba, Elaine Aiken and Milton Castelas. By the mid 1980s, he was well-known in New York television circles.

He also had begun coming out to the Hamptons in the summertime. "The first year I came out east," he said, "was in 1982, when I rented an apartment in Len Bernard's mother's house on Bluff Road. I fell in love with that area near the beach and I liked the town of Amagansett, and I rented there for several summers. In 1987, when a house came on the market on Town Lane, I bought it."

The home was and is one of the great landmark houses in that town. It is Stony Hill Farm, which was, until the Baldwins bought it, the property of the Penny family. In 1998, Alec Baldwin and his wife, actress Kim Basinger, hosted a party there for President Clinton when he visited here, and it was widely attended.

Through it all, Alec Baldwin has kept very busy. Early on, he starred in The Hunt for Red October, an action movie that made him a household name around the country. Since then, he has either starred in or appeared in more than a dozen films, including: Pearl Harbor, State and Main, Outside Providence, The Edge with Anthony Hopkins, Great Balls of Fire, Alice, Working Girl, Talk Radio, Beetlejuice, She's Having a Baby, Married to the Mob, Miami Blues, Mercury Rising, Ghosts of Mississippi, The Juror, The Getaway, and Heaven's Prisoners. He tried his hand at directing, making The Devil and Daniel Webster, but the production has been tied up in lawsuits because the producers ran out of funds in mid-production.

On TV, besides appearing in CBS's Knot's Landing, and on NBC in the miniseries Dress Gray, he's had starring or supporting roles in numerous TV films, most notably "Path to War," for which he received an Emmy for playing Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara. He co-produced a mini-series called "Nuremberg:Infamy on Trial" and starred in the Cinemax film The Confession.

Emperor Meiji's 44-year reign in late 19th century Japan bore witness to its remarkable transition from an isolated feudal regime to a society modern, sophisticated and, to some degree, westernized. At the encouragement of the new emperor, brilliant Japanese ceramists and metalworkers entered major expositions in leading cities abroad where they not only garnered top honors and prizes, but also absorbed salient features of western taste and culture. Upon returning home, they experimented with new technologies, configurations and designs. Many of these incorporated western influence, while at the same time remaining markedly eastern in concept and taste. The newly learned skills, together with retention of traditional Japanese style, served to appeal to western markets, thus reinforcing the original Meiji premise: to establish for Japan a strong aesthetic and economic presence worldwide. Now, over 100 years after his reign, Emperor Meiji's Golden Age is still very much alive.

beauty of Long Island. William Merritt Chase eventually established his school in the Shinnecock Hills and Irving Wiles founded the Peconic School on the North Fork. Edith and Henry Prellwitz, who painted in Peconic year round, are among the few artists to have created images of Eastern Long Island in the wintertime. They were the grandparents of Dan's cover artist, Wendy Prellwitz.

The diversity of the collected works span time and "isms." The museum holds the largest collection of works by Childe Hassam in a private institution; "Bayberry Bush" is to be on permanent view. The works of John Twachtman, Arthur Dove and Helen Torr, Jane Freilicher, Sheridan Lord, Esteban Vincente, Fairfield Porter, William Sidney Mount, Jackson Pollock and Lee Krasner, Roy Lichtenstein, Andy Warhol, Jean Mitchell, North Haven's Eric Fischl and April Gornik, Julian Schnabel, Chuck Close and Ross Bleckner and Conceptualists like Barbara Bloom and Barbara Kruger are represented.

In the new facility, Southampton College's Visual and Fine Arts programs will utilize 5,500 square feet of studio space. LIU dent body, and offering a chance for growth in the arts program comparable to the success of the writing program. Dr. Steinberg also described the powerful Internet II system, which will link the campus to scholars around the world, providing "a marvelous opportunity to be the center of gravity for contemporary culture and educational purposes."

Southampton College's new Provost, Dr. Daniel J. Rodas, extols this "historic moment" and the synergy created through the "mutually beneficial partnership." Other expansion in the Southampton College renaissance includes a $3.5 million Marine Science Station, the $10 million Bishop-Burke Library/Learning Center, a $13 million recreation center, $12.5 million for renovations to the student union, $9 million for dormitory space and a $5 million solar aquatic waste treatment plant.

A committee headed by Trustee Dorothy Lichtenstein will recommend a list of architects to the full Board of Trustees of the museum and an architect will be chosen. A site plan will then be prepared for the Town's approval.

The project, expected to cost an estimated $35 to $40 million, will be privately funded, and no local taxes will be used.

Baldwin has also made many stage appearances, several on Broadway, including: A Streetcar Named Desire, (Tony Nomination), Joe Orton's Loot, directed by John Tillinger (Theatre World Award) and Caryl Churchill's Serious Money. Off-Broadway, he appeared as Macbeth in the 1998 New York Shakespeare Festival production directed by George C. Wolf, In A Prelude to a Kiss at Circle Rep, directed by Norman Rene (Obie Award) and in David Mamet's Life in the Theatre.

For a while, it looked like Baldwin would run for national office. His mother once told me that he would make an excellent President of the United States. He also considered running for local office, writing numerous letters to the editors of local newspapers about issues of the day. But he changed his mind about that possibility. He would concentrate on his career in acting.

And helping others. Baldwin serves on the board of the Carol M. Baldwin Breast Cancer Research Fund, sponsored by Stony Brook University in honor of his late mother. In fact, he recently performed a series of guest appearances on Hollywood Squares, donating his entire paycheck, $250,000, to that charity. He is also on the boards of People for the American Way and The Bay Street Theatre.

Baldwin's latest film will have its premiere at the opening night gala of the Hamptons International Film Festival on Wednesday night, October 22, at the East Hampton Cinema, just four miles from where he lives.

The film is a dark, disturbing affair entitled The Cooler and it is about life behind the scenes at a Las Vegas gambling casino. Three actors share top billing in the movie. One is William H. Macy, starring as an employee of the casino whose job it is to "cool down" the hot streaks of various high rollers at crap tables Just his presence, without body guards, is usually enough to do that. The second star is Baldwin, playing the casino owner who will stop at nothing to make money and exercise power. And the third is Maria Bello, a cocktail waitress who falls for — not Baldwin — but William H. Macy.

I had the opportunity to enjoy an advance showing of this film on Monday night. Bello, who won a Screen Actors Guild Award for her passionate and headstrong role in the TV show ER, is really, really hot. Macy, who received an Oscar nomination for his role in the movie Fargo, is really, really hapless. Together with Bello, he had sizzling nude scenes. I have no idea whether this film will receive an R rating or an X rating, but it will be a close call.

As for Baldwin, who will be in town with Bello for the premiere and for the Film Festival, his role as the villain, a ruthless casino owner who threatens to kill both of them and tries his mightiest to do so, is so powerful that even now, two days after seeing the film, I have nightmares from it. The Cooler is a remarkable, well-acted film, worthy as the centerpiece of a film festival. And for Alec Baldwin, it could be a career changing assignment. He is maturing into a brilliant character actor, in my opinion. And his skills are no more apparent anywhere than they are in this film.

At the present time, Baldwin is working on a new film, co-starring with Ben Stiller, Jennifer Aniston and Debra Messing. He will also be seen in the upcoming film The Cat in the Hat, based on the popular Dr. Seuss children's book. This Wednesday, he will be in East Hampton for the premiere of The Cooler. I urge you to see it too.

NEDRA'S VIEW OF AMAGANSETT

In James Salter's book "Light Years," Nedra returns to Amagansett thinking her life is over. She is 47 and ill. She is an ex-wife and mother of Franca. And she comes here because she has summered here before.

BY JAMES SALTER

Nedra was ill. She did not admit it except to feel uncomfortable suddenly in the city. She wanted the open air, she wanted the invisible. Like those anadromous creatures that start without knowing it to their final sites, that somehow, across incredible distances, find their way home, she went — it was the beginning of spring — to Amagansett and took a small house that had once been the shed on a farm. There were some apple trees, long past bearing. The boards of the floor were worn smooth. The village and fields, everything was empty and still. Here she made her ashram, beneath the open skies, by occasional fires, near the continent's fingery edge.

She was forty-seven. Her hair was rich and beautiful, her hands strong. It seemed that all she had known and read, her children, her friends, things which had at one time been disparate, contending, were quiet at last and had found their place within her. A sense of harvest, of abundance, filled her. She had nothing to do and she waited.

She woke in the silence of a bedroom still cool and dark. She was not sleepy, she was aware the night had passed. The small, gnarled branches of the apple trees were stirring in a soundless wind. The sun was not yet up. The sky to the west was the deepest blue, with clouds almost too brilliant, too dense. In the east it was almost white. Her body and mind were rested, they were at peace. They were being readied for a final transformation she only guessed....

Franca came to visit her mother once more. They sat beneath the trees. Nedra had money, she had bought some good wine....

All around stretched the wide farmland made thrilling by hidden sea. Rabbits were feeding in the dusty fields, there were sea birds on the shore. All this would vanish, it would belong to poodle owners, Arnaud had said. Its remoteness has saved it, but now the farms were melting like ice in the spring; they were breaking, drifting off forever. All this vast endland, this barren province would disappear. We live too long, Nedra thought....

A voice of illness has spoken to her. Like the voice of God, she did not know its source, she only knew what she was bidden, which was to taste everything, to see everything with one long, final glance. A calm had come over her, the calm of a great journey ended.

"Read to me," she would ask.

In the tall brown grass of the dunes, a pagan couch that overlooked the sea, she sat clasping her knees and listening while Franca read, as Viri had so often, to his daughters, to them all. It was Troyat's life of Tolstoy, a book like the Bible, so rich in events, in sorrow, in partings, so filled with struggle that strength welled up on every page. The chapters became one's flesh, one's own being; the trials washed one clean. Warm, sheltered from the wind, she listened as Franca's clear voice described the landscape of Russia, on and on, grew weary at last and stopped. They lay in silence, like lionesses in the dry grass, powerful, sated.

"It's good, isn't it?" her daughter asked.

"How I love you, Franca," Nedra said.

Of them all, it was the true love. Of them all, it was the best. That other, that sumptuous love which made one drunk, which one longed for, envied, believed in, that was not life. It was what life was seeking; it was a suspension of life. But to be close to a child, for whom one spent everything, whose life was protected and nourished by one's own, to have that child beside one, at peace, was the real, the deepest, the only joy.

Barefoot along the hissing shore, sometimes touching, hip to hip, in the shadowy interior of cars, entering shops, were couples lost in obsession with each other, heavy with the satisfaction of possessing, laden with it, brimming. She saw them, they passed before her blandly, as ordinary souls appear to a pilgrim. She had no interest in them. They were limp, translucent, like petals. Their time had not yet come. Gone from her completely was the knowledge she once was sure she would keep forever: the taste, the exaltation of days made luminous by love — with it, one had everything. "That's an illusion," she said.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #270 Dem Bones...

While excavating for a new barn recently, an Island resident unearthed a large batch of very old bones, presumed human. An investigation will follow.

I suggest they use the medical approach and figure out what the thing is by figuring out what

It is not a batch of tourists who stood waiting too long to get a clear cell signal because no cell phone remains are present.

It is not an old group of young revelers who partied all night, since no condom wrappers or beer cans were found.

It is not a young group of old revelers who partied all night since no condom wrappers, beer cans or blister cards with the word VIAGRA SAMPLE were found.

It is not old deer hunters since no guns, bullets, thermos', beer cans, toilet paper or any evidence of deer were found.

It is not old Indian deer hunters, because then they would have found deer bones there too, as well as some pipes, some discarded female deerskin dresses and other evidence of a "We Got a Deer" party.

It is not a group of Islanders who got together to discuss where the good fishing and clamming spots were, simply because that would never happen. You're nuts if you think someone on Shelter Island is going to reveal a good fishing or clamming spot to anyone else. It's possible someone on Shelter Island might reveal that information in a deathbed confession, but only if the family was smart enough to administer some really good painkillers. The only ones who might know where all the good spots are is the Island's clergy, but they've all got this big thing about confidentiality, so they're no help.

It is not an old board or committee that stood there discussing and debating for an eternity because no guns, knives, ropes, lead pipes, or wrenches were found.

It is not a group of artists who decided to have a painting contest to see who could paint the best Island scene because no guns, knives, ropes, lead pipes, or wrenches were found.

It is not a group of Quakers having a meeting, because they're still here. (I highly recommend attending a meeting, regardless of your faith; it's a great experience).

It is not a group of captured humans from an old Twilight Zone episode, because there was no cookbook found titled, "How to Serve Man."

It is not an old fireman's barbecue that just wouldn't end because there are no chicken bones, ribs, Coke cans, "Firemen Are Always in Heat" tee shirts, or parts of cell phones stomped into the ground in frustration.

It is not an old group of Mashomack conservationists because they aren't allowed off the reser-

It is not my family because the skulls found were intact, whereas, we all had our skulls cracked by loving parents.

It is not a group of early 5K runners that never stopped stretching for a warm up, because no water bottles, towels, energy bar wrappers, candy bar wrappers, hats, shoelaces, cell phones, text pagers, beepers, watches with heart monitors, watches with caloric usage display, watches with mirrors so you can just look at yourself all day and get it over with, or gold jewelry was found.

The teeth in the skulls found had no fillings and no braces, so that rules out Island parents saying, "We've had it... let's just kill them all...."

So the next time someone on Island says they have a bone to pick with you, be careful, they might...

A-Mazed Visitors At Harbes Family Farm

Mattituck, Columbus Day Weekend

Ever since corn has been cultivated here in the U.S., children have played hide-and-seek in cornfields. Though we lack the great expanses of those fields found out west here on the North Fork, Mattituck farmer Ed Harbes has created his own corn mazes and the response has been, well, amazing. Children of all ages delight in the acres and acres of stalks, ears and pumpkins during harvest season at Harbes farm, and Ed feels that this year in particular "has been very good for our pumpkins. People also love to enjoy our rural beauty and have a great time out here. It's wonderful to see their enthusiasm." The Harbes family operates two farmstands, one on Sound Avenue in Mattituck, the other on the Main Road in Jamesport. Both have mazes, mums, local produce, loads of pumpkins, and the best Super Sweet corn on the North Fork.

Harvest At Krupski Farms: A North Fork Tradition

Peconic, Columbus Day Weekend

Four generations of Krupskis have farmed here in Peconic, and the tradition continues with the family's special emphasis on harvest season. This is a real old-fashioned East End stand, with family members doing everything from driving tractors to weighing pumpkins. "The season started a little late due to cool weather," said Helen Krupski as she bunched ears of beautiful Indian corn, but the pumpkins were clearly a big hit with the happy crowd on sunny Columbus Day. And Southold Trustee Al Krupski Jr. was enthusiastic about the farm's still-beautiful plump tomatoes. "The plants look great and there's still lots of nice green fruit on them," he said as he manned the pop corn booth. "If the weather holds, we'll be picking them for a while longer." Local vine-ripened tomatoes in your salad and fresh pumpkin pie for dessert? It doesn't get better than that, no matter which fork you use.

"Winners Show" Opens At East End Arts Council

Riverhead, October 18

The Winners Show will feature the work of the six artists who were the Best in Show winners from the 2002 juried shows. Robert Mehling of Riverhead works primarily in oils and watercolors. "For me, beauty is best revealed in the pictorial language of traditional realism," he said. Mica McCann is an award winning artist and designer who divides her time between N.Y.C. and Remsenburg. She has designed private label jewelry collections for Valentino, Albert Nipon, and Anita Lang. Dennis Snyder of Southampton works primarily in oils. There's a raw, spiritual quality to Dennis's work that many people are drawn to.

Elliott Salta loves capturing images on film, taking pictures primarily of nature and landscapes. Elaine Ward, who enjoys painting from the feeling or memory of a place, is a graduate of the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris and has shown her work in New York as well as at the Parrish Art Museum, Elaine Benson Gallery and Guild Hall. Bruce Testa's style is representational, with a main focus on landscapes and figures. He has exhibited his work in New York as well as locally. Gallery located on East Main Street in Riverhead. EAST END KIDS

Potatoes and Pumpkins

I visited the Hamptons last weekend to attend two events with my dad and my godmother, WCBS News anchor Cindy Hsu. Our first stop was in Bridgehampton at the Hampton Day School Potato Festival where I had a chance to taste spuds from famous chefs from around the Hamptons. Yummy. Kids played games, went on rides, listened to the Nancy Atlas Band, tried the climbing wall – no not me – are you kidding?

I did have a dangerous encounter – my first face-to-finger meeting with a bee and it won. After a few seconds with a first aid kit, I was back in action. Schools in the Hamptons are so cool.

Our second stop was at the Southampton Inn where they had a Pumpkin Carving party with pumpkin carver Brad Miller. Kids and parents were creating pumpkins of famous characters. And speaking of famous characters, Dan Rattiner was the evening guest to read scary stories to the kids.

Looking for events to cover so send my dad an email at david@nextpert.com and maybe I'll see you.

You Say "Potato And I Say "Pah-TAH-to"

This past Saturday marked the 16th Annual Potato Festival benefit for The Hampton Day School (nursery through 8th grade). The festivities began at 11 a.m. at The Morriss Center on Butter Lane in Bridgehampton. The weather was perfect and the kids were geared up for a day filled with fun and excitement.

At the entrance on our left was a large area with an assortment of games and activities. My friend Lisa and I decided to get a better look. Our eyes immediately targeted the 40-foot rock climbing wall.

We were impressed by the youngsters who, strapped in their harnesses, were scaling the wall as if they did this on a daily basis. I'm not sure if I could have mastered it but it would have been fun to try. On the opposite side was another big hit, two giant airbed mattresses, crowded with kids jumping their hearts out.

It came time for us to play a few games and we had many choices, most themed around the "potato." There was Pop the Potato, which involved tossing a potato at a board of nails trying to get it to stick (looked a bit messy), Spud Ball, Spud Putting and Spud Toss. I saw a lot of winning shots and it seemed like most everyone was on the way to the prize table. As we rounded the corner, the rock'n sounds of the Nancy Atlas Band drew us to the stage and they know how to keep the party pumped up with their original songs and high energy

The best part, for me, was the "Grand Potato Tasting Tent." I don't know about you, but when there's food involved, I'm happy! As Lisa and I approached the entrance, we saw that we would be tempted to taste everything inside. Thirteen of the best East End restaurants volunteered to prepare and serve some of the most delicious potato dishes you could ever hope to sample. Where to begin was not a question, we just dove right in.

There was Bobby Van's serving up a superb Shepherd's pie and Saracen dishing out their Giambotta while Jean Luc presented an impressive stuffed baked potato with ground beef & tarragon leaf, to name just a few of the delicious meals. For the sweeter side, there was The American Hotel doling out a honey praline with sweet potato pie dessert, and The Inn Spot offering an Irish candy > mint called Praties. I can honestly report that every item on the menu was simply outstanding.

After eating more than our share, we decided to stroll back towards the main stage. On our way back, we passed the craft area where the kids were hard at work creating potato people and enjoying face painting. Next stop was the petting zoo with a baby pig, cute ducklings and tiny turtles keeping all ages captivated. Nearby, the Nature Conservancy also had a table filled with helpful information about the environment. Our final stops were at the puppet and fashion show stages. Here students from the Hampton Day School had made puppets out of real potatoes and designed apparel from potato sacks, creating a "burlap couture." I saw several future fashion designers in the making. Who thought potatoes could be so inspiring?

The 16th Annual Potato Festival was certainly a huge success. There were many supporters and many volunteers on this special day who helped raise money for new programs at the school, such as the visiting artists program. Leslie Paparo and Diane Sjoholm, co-presidents of the Parents Association, were pivotal in organizing this day and would like to thank everyone for their hard work and dedication.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

What a busy weekend...I shopped my feet off. Dodging the raindrops on Sunday, I managed to get a few good deals...Let's shop.

On Main Street, in Southampton look for Gallery Eclectic's sale on selected merchandise until October 20.

At Dansk on Main Street in Southampton you must check out their holiday sale that includes bonus and coupon deals. Stop in and say hi and check it out.

If you need to drop a few pounds before the upcoming holidays, think about going to the Omni Health & Racquet Club on County Road 39 in Southampton to accomplish just that. The Omni's more than 7,000 square feet of space houses the most up to date state-of-the-art equipment and classes. There are two heated swimming pools, sauna, Jacuzzi, steam rooms, and has children's swim hours, Red Cross swim program and affordable day care services. You can do aerobics; Pilate, bike mania, yoga, boxing, racquetball, treadmill, Stairmasters, one-on-one training and even do some Latin dancing. Call 283-4770. Just do it!

Under the same roof as the Omni, the Hampton Jitney is offering some great get-aways including their new service to Foxwoods Casino. There are Broadway show and Radio City Music Hall specials, and for sports fans, check out the Madison Square Garden deals.

At last Kreiss is having their "end of the season sale" which is their biggest sale of the year. Their showroom is filled with new sale merchandise with up to 50% off on select items. All floor samples and luxury bed linens are available for immediate delivery. Can't ask for anything better than that!

Carpet One of the Hamptons on County Road 39 in Southampton is having a "Liz Claiborne and Fall Colors Sale" with the lowest prices of the season until October 20. Now is the time to set your goal in fashion, flare and function in your home. Check out all the sales here, I'm sure that you will love the savings.

OK, my dream is to have a piano brought to my home for the holidays so that my granddaughters can play their Christmas music. How? Call Piano Barn on Montauk Highway in Water Mill and they can do that for you. The Piano Barn sells, rents, moves, tunes pianos...Right now they are having their fall 2003 piano clearance.

There is a "final clearance sale" going on at Donna Parker Antiques on Montauk Highway in Water Mill. Log onto their website at: www.habitatltd.com

If you're looking for a lighting sale, stop in at English Country Antiques, Southampton, Bridgehampton and East Hampton and I am sure you will find exactly what you are looking for at a cool 20% off.

Bridgehampton's Dalston Station on Main Street is having a "giant moving sale" on lamps, mirrors, bookcases, framed prints, occasional tables, candles and candle holders, needlepoint pillows, cotton ladies' travel casuals, nautical NDI silk flowers and more. The prices are greatly reduced here and ready to go out the door.

As usual Eileen Fisher on Newtown Lane in East Hampton has a wonderful selection of women's clothing for fall/winter. If you like the comfy casual look and feel, this is the place...

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

If you know of, or are having any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops or sales, please email me at shoptil@danspapers.com or fax me at: 631-537-3330. I'd love to hear from you...

AWAY AT SCHOOL. . . By David Lion RATTINER

Taking My Vitamins

It is impossible to figure out just exactly what it is that we all need to do to stay healthy. They tell us to exercise, to take our vitamins, to eat right (whatever that means), and even when we do all of this, we still never really reach our goal weight. The main reason for this is that after such an exhausting day of eating right, exercising, and taking vitamins, we have to eat some ice cream at midnight while watching Seinfeld reruns.

For the past six months, I would say, I have committed myself to taking a Centrum Performance Vitamin in the morning, every morning without fail. I really thought that for some reason, if I took this magic pill every morning, I would be able to run faster, jump higher, live longer, and just generally be a healthier guy. I was expecting to feel totally different. Little did I know.

The fact of the matter is, absolutely nothing happens to me when I take my vitamin in the morning. I do not feel any different than I have in the past. I do not feel any faster or smarter. I just feel like me. In fact, what I do feel is sick to my stomach when I take this ugly orange pill in the morning, especially if I don't have anything for breakfast. I feel like there is a big razor blade in my stomach if all I have for breakfast in the morning is a vitamin. It is absolutely terrible.

Yet, I still take the pill in the morning, every morning, and probably will as long as they sell those Centrum Performance vitamins. It's got all those herbs that make you a genius, like ginko bilboa. Yes, it's true, nothing has really been proven, but hey, it could be true. There is a chance that it is true. I am totally hooked on these Centrum things. It is like a person that is addicted to drugs.

The funny thing about all of this vitamin business is how crazy people get about them. People take vitamins for all kinds of things. I have gone to people's houses and seen an entire cabinet dedicated to all the different vitamins. Many times, I've seen easily five hundred dollars worth of vitamins and minerals in these cabinets. I have seen some of the strangest things: cod liver oil, six billion iu's of vitamin C, saw palmetto, ginkgo bibloa, shark cartilage, kava kava, calcium, magnesium, zinc, or all three in one pill, multi's plus iron, iron, b-1, b-2, b-3, all the way up to b-12 complex. It is crazy. This is all just off of the top of my head, too. I am sure that there are plenty that I am missing.

It is amazing to me that the vitamin industry is a multi-billion dollar business. Billions of dollars are floating around so that I can eat a shark cartilage pill in the morning. I don't get it. They say that we can get all of our vitamins from food. Most of us like to eat. We like to eat a lot. Yet instead of eating a lot of food, we take these magic little pills hoping that they will solve all of our dietary needs. Then, of course, we eat even more vitamins.

Now don't get me wrong, I am not teasing you as you read this. Please do not think that I think that you are weird for taking so many vitamins and focusing so much on your health, hopelessly focusing, I might add. I do the exact same thing that you do. I take my vitamin in the morning and have considered adding to it. I think about taking a zinc supplement or a C supplement. I constantly am worrying about what I am eating. Not only for health reasons, but so that I don't get fat as well.

We are all in the same boat, and what a miserable boat it is. A lot of my friends at school "eat whatever they want and don't gain a pound." I think that they are a bunch of liars, to be honest with you. I think that they just say that they can eat whatever they want, but the bottom line is that they either work out like crazy to burn it off, or they just don't have very big appetites, so that when they do eat, it is very little in comparison to what goes into my dinosaur of a stomach.

I was reading the other day in this little health guide that my Dad got in the mail about how eating less will make you live longer. There are people out there now who are not anorexic, but are, however, drastically restricting their bodies of food in order to live longer. There has been a study of all different kinds of insects that have been given different quantities of food. The insects given the least amount of food lived the longest.

Well, this is just great. Now, I have to eat a vitamin every day on top of eating absolutely nothing during the day except for a dry piece of bread and some water. No sugar in my coffee, either.

The world is one crazy place. It makes me really angry that we all try so hard to look like movie stars, to live longer than some guy who has lived a really long time, to have the perfect lifestyle. I feel like all of us are trying so hard to live the perfect, modèl American lifestyle that ultimately, we are not really enjoying life. The movie stars cheat. They get plastic surgery, they have personal trainers, they are genetic mutants, and most importantly, I think, they have digital touch-ups now that can erase wrinkles, delete zits, and take twenty pounds off. I guess what I am trying to say to you reading this, and to myself as well, is to relax about the whole thing. Life is a bowl of cherries, you get what you get. It is fun to be alive and to eat ice cream at midnight. It is fun to focus your mind on a good episode of Seinfeld and not that wrinkle in your forehead. Have fun living, don't kill yourself doing it.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

WHEN ETHNICITY COUNTS: SHINNECOCK NATION MUSEUM Part III

An exhibition of twenty Native American bronze sculptures on loan from The Frederick DeMatteis Collection, and currently at the Shinnecock Nation Cultural Center and Museum, demonstrates what we believe we know about Native Americans plus some salient things that we don't know.

First, there are those preconceptions that we already have. Like the exhibit's title, "My Spirit Dances Forever," the pieces (including those by Dave McGary, Joe Beeler and Tracy Beeler) evoke pride, fortitude, and the joy of life. Consider Joe Beeler's bronze heads rendered in a classical style yet reinforcing such strength. Consider also McGary's small yet impressive figurative sculptures detailing not only ceremonial garb but authentic postures and stances as well. We can't help but marvel. The clothes possess a > kind of realism we rarely see, from the feathers of the headgear to the fringes on a jacket. As viewers, we want to relish these accessories and even touch them, but we know this wouldn't be appropriate.

Regarding the figures' poses, they are impressively lifelike, expressing a grace and articulation that is certainly poetic. (This observation may have resulted from McGary's training in classical art.) For example, McGary's warrior readying a bow and arrow is so lyrical that we resist a temptation to judge the act itself. The sculptor does an equally arresting depiction of his figures' facial demeanors, giving them character and determination

Our favorite piece, however, is Tracy Beeler's "Walk Among Stars," featuring three Native American women in a circle dance, arms stretched upward, celebrating life's glory, and their own. It's a work reminding this critic of a scene from the play Fiddler on the Roof. Such a comparison is salient, showing a similar image that unites two very different cultures.

For that one reason, the exhibit expresses some truths we come to acknowledge, regardless of preconceived notions, which we might have had about overwhelming diversity among peoples. The fact that McGary is not a Native American further proves the point that artists tend to see the "big picture."

Honoring the Artist: Margery Gosnell-Qua

Remsenburg artist Margery Gosnell-Qua believes in "working your way up," but don't assume you know what this means. Normally, the expression connotes starting at the bottom of one's profession and going from there. For Ms. Gosnell-Qua, however, the term relates to the varied media she uses.

"I start with a subject and make a watercolor of it. If it has staying power, I then do a black and white monoprint and then an oil on a large canvas," the artist explains. "In this way when I've finished the process, I have a microcosm, an image conceived from different angles. A person has so many sides, it's not just a single moment that expresses a person."

Yet there's something else at work in Ms. Gosnell-Qua's art which deals more with philosophy and less with technique. It has to do with why she paints in the first place. "I want to capture an experience. What I felt like. Once you paint what the senses are, you can paint what you remember about that experience. I simply search for the materials to say what I need."

This week's cover is a good example of the artist's experiential objective. She and her family spent six weeks at the North Shore's Orient Point a few years back and Ms. Gosnell-Qua immersed herself in the local landscape. She was especially drawn to the sailboats and the patterns in the ocean. "It's not something in the ocean or object that inspires me. It's in me."

Like her aim to celebrate the memory of the experience, such as how Orient Point's salt marshes reminded her of Alaska, the cover image also evokes the senses: sight as well as texture, smell and sound.

We inquire about the artist's background to learn the reasons for her approaches. She has an advanced degree in both painting and art history from Pratt Institute and she was influenced by a particular art teacher who helped her understand Klee's work. She teaches art at Suffolk Community College in Riverhead.

Ms. Gosnell-Qua was forthcoming when she spoke about the underlying motivations behind her images, "Perhaps it's a longing, that I have to recreate the experience of what I've seen."

And she certainly has a lot of experiences to recall, including the time she spent in Tuscany (she calls it "my spiritual place") and Block Island. "My husband and I love to bike to the highest point on Block Island and look down on the bluffs," she muses. As Ms. Gosnell-Qua speaks, we can't help but see the scene in our own mind, too.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

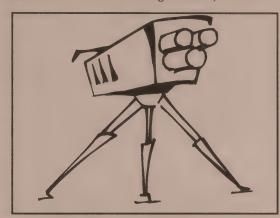

Rage and cruelty would be inevitable in the movies since violence hangs around our back doors with the persistence of a hungry mosquito given the potential of a great white shark. Most frightening is that violence, like the insect, can find its way in without opening a door. Evil's violence is omnipresent. We are seemingly helpless against wicked malevolence and, pity the child who is much more vulnerable. One of the more corrupt sins is the violation of innocence. The deep, penetrating damage done by child abuse is the core of Clint Eastwood's film, Mystic River. It is a masterful achievement of craftsmanship and sensibility, taking, as it does, the profound consequences caused by befoulment as the film's prime propellant, not vengeance. Mr. Eastwood's career has been closely identified with, let's face it, vigilantism - vicious, sinful acts had to be tracked to its source and, the perpetrator made to pay. The end was violent, even in his very innovative western, Unforgiven, for which he won an Oscar. With Mystic River, Eastwood has taken the film's two extreme acts of violence to a grueling and pensive depth of emotion and loathing for brutish natures. It submerges the audience into a brooding, mourning, suspended state of objectivity where you feel the waves of violence spreading outward without an end.

Three boys, close friends, are growing up, close by the Mystic River in a working class area of Boston. They play, kid around, and talk baseball, all the usual stuff. One day a car approaches them and two men, could-be cops, take one of them away. Four days later the boy returns, he'd been abducted, physically abused and has escaped. Their boyhoods have been terminated. The boys grow up quickly and separately. Jimmy (Sean Penn), Dave (Tim Robbins) and, Sean (Kevin Bacon) have quite different lives. Jimmy operates a grocery store. He hasn't had to leave the neighborhood, he kind of owns it. He'd been a gang leader and now a local, tough guy fixer. The burg is his but, he's nowhere. Bacon's Sean has become a police detective and lives in a fancier neighborhood. His personal life, however, is in shambles. Sullen and silenced, his wife has left him. She calls him and doesn't say a word. Dave, played to troublesome perfection by Robbins, has stayed in the nabe and married a worrisome, untrusting wife, Celeste (Marcia Gay Harden). Her cousin is Jimmy's wife, Annabeth (Laura Linney) who is a terror. Suddenly, they are all thrown together again by the murder of Jimmy's oldest daughter.

More than a classic who-done-it, it is a study into the psychological questioning of the building of personalities. How does early trauma affect the adult? How are the women bent by a 25year-old incident they did not witness? Can they be trusted? The boy-man friends and their families move through the old neighborhood by the water with fear and trepidation, as if in a blurred dream where, on a dark day, Jimmy's grocery store takes on a momentous cloud of sadness that resonates through the audience. This is, of course, the product of a fine story by Dennis Lehane and lasersharp script by Brian Helgeland (L.A. Confidential) performed with brilliance by an inspired cast. It is, however, Clint Eastwood's personal success. His direction of the actors, camera and, general staff, many of which are long-time regulars such as cinematographer, Tom Stern and production designer, Henry Bumstead, has the orchestrated quality of a symphonic score. This takes us to the music he's composed for the film a stunning, bass choral structure vibrantly in sync with the hymnal tone of this moving picture's content. It's a free-bent prayer.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer /writer/director of award-winning European and American feature films. He has been a judge at Major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

Film Previews: Dan's Papers Peeked

Easy Six

Appearing in the Golden Starfish Narrative category, Easy Six is a dark film with a few funny moments. Director Chris Iovenko based his screenplay on Edward Allen's well-received novel Mustang Sally.

The film opens with a straight-laced English Professor named Packard Schmidt, played by Julian Sands, who likes to tell dirty jokes in the classroom. Already he registers as a conflicted individual. Packard is leaving for a convention in Las Vegas and his co-worker and friend Frank Iverson, played by John Savage, urges him to take advantage of this trip. Basically, have fun with the ladies. Frank also asks Packard to locate his daughter, Sally, who has been living in Las Vegas.

Packard soon discovers that Sally has been quite busy with her new career as a prostitute, and now she works at a bordello on the outskirts of Vegas. After recovering from his initial shock, he decides to give in to temptation and take Frank's advice. The tale becomes even more twisted. Jim Belushi, playing an Elvis "pimp", brings a bit of comic relief to lighten the mood.

The story just gets stickier when all three characters unite in Florida for the holidays. Packard is torn between his loyalty to his friend and his lust and desperation for his friend's daughter. At this point, Packard's desire for Sally becomes overwhelming and eventually the situation explodes.

The film begins to allude to a dark side of Sally and Frank's relationship. Frank's character becomes less and less likeable as we finally start to sympathize and understand Sally's view. In the end, the film and its characters find their destiny and hope for new beginnings.

Island

This documentary drama, set in one of the poorest neighborhoods in Chicago, takes the audience on a troubling journey. We take part in the everyday lives of Saint Agatha church community members and their priest, Father Michael Ivers.

Island is a black and white film that delivers its message with a timeless style and artistic contrast. The use of black and white creates a symbolic mood, visually adding a more intense feeling to the struggle and conflict shown.

Director Greg Samata brings us into the homes of community members who were forced to battle the infestation of drugs and high crime rate that continually runs unchecked through the streets of this dilapidated Chicago neighborhood. The documentary allows these amazing individuals to share with us their sorrow and pain while we listen to their stories and experiences.

The opening sequence takes us into the heart and soul of a mother who lost her daughter in an automobile accident. Her struggle to overcome this tragedy has taken years of believing and forgiving. Another gentlemen shares his views on the ongoing problem of racism and bigotry that he has witnessed during his lifetime. Films like this are an important tool and reminder that some of the same obstacles that the African American society lived through in the past still exists today.

The focus of this film sends a powerful message, teaching us how we can build bridges by keeping faith alive. In the end, the film leaves the audience with a lot to think about. A renewed feeling of hope leaves us feeling that anyone can triumph over tragedy.

Just Another Story and Piggy

This is Hamptons International Film Festival's second year of mentoring "Rising Stars," those promising young film actors making their debuts at the Festival. They will be guided by accomplished actress Joan Allen (Pleasantville, The Ice Storm, Nixon) who is the recipient of this year's Golden Starfish Award for Career Achievement in Acting. The five "rising stars" and their films are: Mylika Davis and GQ (yes, that's the name he uses!) in Just Another Story, Elizabeth Moss in Virgin, and Savannah Haske and Dean Wareham in Piggie.

Just Another Story and Piggie, both films by young American filmmakers, are in the "World Cinema Narrative Features" section of the festival. The locales for the main characters in each film are quite different, but the underlying themes are similar – young people struggling to grow up and find themselves. Just Another Story is a hip-hop musical set in Brooklyn, and Piggie takes place in rural upstate New York.

Just Another Story is a little tighter and the more focused of the two films. The film festival blurb labels it "a multi-racial Breakfast Club for the hip-hop generation," but I would go a little farther back in film history (1970s) and call it a very contemporary Saturday Night Fever. The film's director, GQ, is a triple threat. He also wrote and stars in this film, and he succeeds admirably in all.

He plays Stix, the 22-year-old son of a route delivery man and stay-at-home mom, who wants to be a hip-hop performer. He's a pretty good rapper, lives at home and seems to earn a meager income as a DJ at private clubs and parties. Stix's father is proud of his family and what he has achieved. He teaches his two sons

ENTERTAINMENT IN THE HAMPTONS

Take Five 2003 with Jan Silver

Another fall weekend with many entertaining choices. Chicago's famous Second City comedy troupe performs at Southampton College on Friday evening, and Bay Street Theatre presents new-play readings on Saturday evening and Sunday brunch time. Marc Shaiman and Scott Wittman, Tony Award-winning composer and lyricist of Hairspray, speak in East Hampton on Saturday night, while Southampton's Parrish Art Museum opens its 38th juried exhibition on Saturday. There are good musicians at local clubs plus three unusual films to be seen.

The full schedule for the Hamptons International Film Festival (Oct.22-26) is available online at www.hamptonsfilmfest.com. Screenings and seminars take place in East Hampton, Southampton, Sag Harbor and Westhampton Beach. There are 22 world premieres and many East Coast and New York premieres among the feature films, documentaries, and short films to be shown. Tickets ($10 and up) are available at HIFF's main box office, 101 Main St., East Hampton, or by calling 1-866-468-7619.

THEATRE

Bay Street Theatre's annual fall play-reading series features Joyce Johnson's Door Wide Open, an intimate look at the playwright's romantic relationship with Jack Kerouac, the writer who became the poster boy for the Beat generation (1950s). With original music by David Amram, who will perform, Doors Wide Open will be read at 7 p.m. Saturday. At 11 a.m. on Sunday, Theresa Rebeck's drama The Water's Edge will be read (come at 10:30 a.m. for complimentary coffee and bagels). The Sag Harbor theater always features Manhattan actors. Tickets are $10 at the box office or free to Friends of Bay Street (call 631-725-0818).

Southampton's Parrish Art Museum presents a night of comedy with Chicago's famous Second City troupe on Saturday, 7 p.m., at Southampton College's Avram Theater. Second City's work ranges from improvisational to well-rehearsed skits. Tickets are $40 for Parrish Business Council members, $60 for the general public. Call 631-283-2118 ext. 45 for reservations; some tickets may be available at the door.

This is the last weekend to catch Spindletop Productions' enjoyably ghoulish staging of Dracula at Guild Hall's John Drew Theater, East Hampton. Performances are Thursday through Saturday evening at 8 p.m., and Sunday at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. Tickets are $20 adults, $15 students (suitable for ages 9 and up) and are available by calling Theatremania at 1-866-811-4111. There is a dinner/theater package or brunch/theater package with the Farmhouse Restaurant ($42; call 631-324-8585).

FILMS

The Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center begins its fall "Finest in World Cinema" series with Together (China). It is the story of a provincial 13-year-old violin prodigy who comes to study in Beijing while his father struggles to support them. Screening times are 7:30 p.m. Fri., 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Sat., and 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. Sun. Tickets are $10 adults, $7 students and seniors, $3 WHBPAC Film Society members at the door or by calling the box office at 631-288-1500 after 1 p.m.

The mystery-thriller Identity, with John Cusack, Ray Liotta, Alfred Molina and Rebecca deMornay, will be shown at Sag Harbor's John Jermain Library at 6:30 p.m. on Friday. There is no admission charge, but seating is limited so please arrive by 6:15 p.m.

The Parrish Art Museum will screen the Oscarnominated Mexican film Amores Perros (2001) at 7 p.m. on Monday. It tells three interrelated stories of love, brutality, betrayal and redemption. Tickets are $5 for Museum members, $8 for non-members.

MUSIC

The music scene features performers at local restaurants and clubs this week: Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse – Commander Cody and the Lost Planet Airmen (Sat.); East Hampton – Jane Hastay and Peter Martin Weiss (Fri.), Todd Michaels (Sat.) at Maidstone Arms; Paul Gene (Fri. & Sat.) at Mary Jane's; musicians at Rubi Red; Sag Harbor – Hunky Page at American Hotel (Fri. & Sat.), Andy Boracci at Spinnaker's (Sat.); Bridgehampton – Stefanie Cardinali jazz group at World Pie (Sun. brunch) and Pierre's (Sun. eve); Water Mill – rock with the Lone Sharks at Gin Lane (Thurs.). There are also good local musicians at Belle's East, Southampton, and New Moon Café, East Quogue.

SPEAKERS

The hit musical Hairspray's Tony Award winning composer and lyricist, Marc Shaiman and Scott Wittman, will speak and perform (!) at BookHampton, East Hampton, on Saturday at 9 p.m. The duo have also done the music for several successful movies.

Starbucks in Bridgehampton is the venue for open poetry readings on Sundays at 1 p.m., and four members of the East End Poetry Workshop (Bobbie Kaufman, Tammy Morgan, Alex Russo and Virginia Walker) will read from their work at the Rogers Memorial Library, Southampton, on Sunday at 3 p.m. (no admission charge).

that they can achieve whatever they want in Stix's "homies" (friends) are a multi-racial group from his neighborhood, all trying to find a meaningful place for themselves in their working-class world while trying to avoid hard drugs, AIDS and violence. Hip-hop music is a passion that unites the young blacks, Hispanics and whites in this Brooklyn community, no differently than how New York City sports teams are a passion for their fathers.

Mylika Davis, another HIFF "rising star," portrays the young black girl in Stix's gang. Her character, Lexi, is cute, smart and sassy, but Lexi's development is slight because she is not the main focus of the film. Stix's other friends are also intriguing stereotypes: the philosophical white geek, the Hispanic good girl looking for an honest relationship, a talented black man tied down by his mother, and a bi-racial girl struggling to find out who she is. They meet an older, paraplegic man who unapologetically tells them of the full life he threw away. He becomes a catalyst for their thoughts.

The script, acting, direction and music in Just Another Story are very accomplished, and mostly attributable to GQ. Although his Stix does not have the burning focus and drive of John Travolta's Tony in Saturday Night Fever, Stix comes from a loving, reliable family and is on the brink of finding himself. This film is presented by Showtime.

Piggie is the story of Fannie (Savannah Haske), a motherless girl of about 18 years living on a farm in upstate New York with her widower father, Jim (Robert John Burke). He appears to be a well-educated but taciturn Baby Boomer who calms his inner demons through physical work. Fannie is just blossoming into womanhood, and all she wants is a boyfriend, but she has no appealing female role models.

A small time drifter, Nile (Dean Wareham), arrives in town and enters their lives. Fannie becomes obsessed with Nile and fantasizes that he's her boyfriend. ("I just want you...and maybe to be a country singer.") The locals think Fannie's a bit off-the-wall but harmless, and most of them are wary of Nile.

Fannie's story is partially told in voice-over country songs expressing her thoughts and hopes. The music also provides an evocative background as the camera catches the rich greens, browns and reds of late summer and early autumn days on the farm and in town. The characters portrayed by all the actors in Piggie are very believable, including John C. Reilly (Renee Zellweger's cuckolded husband in Chicago) in a cameo as a drug-dealing nemesis from Nile's shady past.

Piggie is shot in digital video and, in many scenes, the camera is hand-held. The film could still use a little editing, but it has been sensitively directed by Alison Bagnall. The screenwriters are Ms. Bagnall and Savannah Haske, with original music by Dusty Trails and Dean Wareham. Ms. Haske, who resembles Angelina Jolie, is expected at the Festival for the "Rising Stars" symposium at 4 p.m. on October 25 at Guild Hall.

Local Angel: Theological Political Fragments

Following the events of September 11 artist Udi Aloni, whose colossal figurative work is used in advertisements and appears on buildings all over Manhattan, created this tragic yet beautiful documentary in New York and in Israel. His search for meaning in a violent, unstable world explores "political, theological and artistic messages, if such messages exist."

Tamir Muskat beats fiercely on drums, a sack hiding his face, setting a tone of rage and urgency at the outset. The relentless reminder staccatos throughout the film, punctuated with the sharp surprise of a gunshot. The balance of

with drama, passion and beauty.

Much of the film is in English with subtitles used for Hebrew or Arabic, allowing the viewer to savor the flavor of the language while taking in the imagery of this fragile, beautiful yet powerful documentary. Activists, scholars, politicians, and Arafat are interviewed in an open and candid setting while theological aspects heretofore under-explored are openly brought into the discussion.

The counsel of friends and family is sought, with each point of view closely analyzed and compared. The filmmaker's mother, Shulamit Aloni, a founder of the modern human rights movement in Israel and former Minister of Communications and the Arts, Science and Technology, is "a radical voice devoid of self importance... fighting for what is right." They interview her Palestinian counterpart, Dr. Hanan Ashrawi with Yasser Arafat in Ramallah.

"The worst times are now... they pound the Palestinians," laments Dr. Ashrawi, citing racism - "guilty de facto by existing" - directed towards Palestinians. The issue is the occupation.

Arafat is asked what he would need for peace. "Two states, side by side, for our children, for security and stability in the Middle East." He talks of the control of the holy places, not the right of return. He speaks of his childhood, when he played alongside the children of Jewish families, who were called "cousins."

Ms. Aloni talks of the Israeli airmen who refuse to fly missions that will kill children. She recalls other times and places where men "followed orders of a legitimate government" resulting in the atrocities of the Holocaust. Her son describes the Nazis as "pure evil and the Jews were the ultimate victims."

Meanwhile rap artists, DAM - which means blood in both Hebrew and Arabic - chant "who is the terrorist?" Then, "to send Sharon to fight terrorism is like sending Bin Laden to build a building."

The filmmaker wonders at the power of Hebrew, invoking the names of the ancients, "the holy language will open up like an abyss and swallow us whole... we have awakened

"Who will stand in the way of a revolt of a holy language?" asks Gershom Shalom.

The poet Haviva defines destruction as it "begins sometime before the physical fall, where it erupts into our consciousness... where we can see it as an opportunity to act. Destruction is a process, not a historical or apocalyptical moment." This leads Aloni to thoughts on how to deconstruct the sacred and to rebuild it into something constructive rather than violent.

The film culminates in a merry - go - round of images juxtaposed as panels. Artistry, imagination, poetry and reflection are elements to create a process by which the restoration of hope can occur. Aloni concludes, "God doesn't want us to kill for or in his name."

Orwell Rolls In His Grave

Has America entered an Orwellian world of doublespeak where outright lies can pass for the truth? Are Americans being sold a bill of goods by a handful of media corporations and political elites whose interests have little in common with the interests of the American people? This movie explores what the media doesn't like to talk about - itself.

Filmmaker Robert Kane Pappas has brought together a former CBS producer, a US congressman and some of the country's leading intellectual voices, to examine the mix of business, politics and ideology that control our media.

INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

Are Americans being given the information a democracy needs to survive or have we been electronically lobotomized into loving "Big Brother?" "Orwell Rolls in His Grave" reminds us that 1984 is no longer a date in the future.

Scene Stealers

Craig Mowry's Scene Stealers was filmed at some very recognizable locales in the Hamptons, with a refreshing, amusing new approach and a brilliantly diverse cast. Sonia Braga, Peter Bogdanovich, Robert Vaughn, and Bob Balaban, a celebrated group of actors, all play themselves and are interwoven throughout the film with unknowns struggling in the business of filmmaking.

One movie within this movie, Attention Deficit, is from a script, Bipolar, stolen by a producer, John Larocque (Bob Sior) after he listens to the pitch by Bipolar's author, filmmaker Billy Bottomsly (Craig Mowry). The innovative concepts of the film include a live ending.

Bottomsly determines to get even with Larocque, and he enlists the assistance of his struggling actor pal to kidnap the $15 milliona-picture actress, Casey Van Haddon (Laraine Gordon) who plays the lead in Larocque's Attention Deficit, and her manager as well.

Then the "starjacked" Van Haddon is forced to star in Bottomsly's film, Venezuela, which is stolen from a script by Larocque, in a production that is laughably awful, and serves to make a statement about Hollywood values. Ironically, Van Haddon responds to Bottomsly's direction and becomes a better actress.

The super-rich are represented by the owner of the film studio housing the abduction/production, Caroline Kennar, who is the widow of a media mogul but started out as a fifties cabaret chanteuse, and her songs are sprinkled throughout the scenes. Instead of rescuing the kidnapped star and her agent, Kennar invites Bottomsly to lunch at her ocean front mansion where a tete-a-tete reveals her motivations.

After some nights spent in the studio on Aerobeds with a soupcon of kanoodling, much of Venezuela is completed. The facades of the characters fall away in the peculiar circumstances, with Phoebe Bendum (Katy McGannon), Van Haddon's manager, turning on her captors. The police arrive and Bottomsly and company are jailed.

On opening night for what is supposed to be Attention Deficit, Venezuela is shown instead, throwing Van Haddon into a raging encounter with Bottomsly. Reality is confronted again, and each film in this film redefines who is "us" and who is "them." In the final aspect of reality audience members get caught up in a post film Q and A.

The tightly crafted film is a completely original, delightful, dramatic gem with a Midsummer Night's Dream whimsy beneath the chaos and comedy. The action, imprinted in Mowry's close ups, is cleverly carried through the rest of the cast.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

FOODS OF NAPLES AND CAMPANIA

Giuliano Bugialli, award-winning author of numerous cookbooks on Italian cucina dedicated his "latest newborn" to his brother, Paolo, a journalist and a "...real Florentine, his tongue was sharp as a knife." In his Foods of Naples and Campania, he takes the opportunity to explore his subject the way his brother did - with a journalist's eye. In this latest book, Giuliano looks to the culture as well as the cuisine. The Neapolitans, he writes, "enjoy spending their lives on the streets, eating and doing business on the street." His goal in this book is to combine the Neapolitan locale with the food in punta dei predi (in a humble way).

Giuliano points out that Naples, as the capital of an entire kingdom, became a repository for the food traditions of the whole area, developing their own versions of dishes. One of the interesting aspects of the book is that Giuliano offers several versions of certain recipes to show their fascinating differences. I loved the different takes on the familiar.

Eggplants and peppers appear to be the most characteristic vegetables of the region and are prepared in a multitude of delectable ways. And vegetables, throughout Italy, are always served as a separate course. "They're never served on the same plate with meat or fish." The chapter on open-air markets features a plenitude of soup. "Zuppe and Minestre" are soups based on vegetables and legumes. Here is an opportunity to incorporate the remarkable variety of herbs, greens and dried beans available to us today in deliciously familiar and healthy dishes.

The number of recipes in the chapter on dried pasta and tomatoes is staggering - a true study in the different styles of tomato sauces to serve with pasta. And of course, we cannot forget Neapolitan pizza. Giuliano offers an entire dissertation on the art and origins of pizza. Coffee is practically a religion in Naples, and the city is famous for its pastries - cannoli perhaps being the best-known southern Italian dessert.

In this handsome book combining both food and travel there are more than 100 stunning photographs shot on location. The more than 175 authentic recipes, impeccably researched and tested, communicate the flavor of life in Naples. Foods of Naples and Campania is a delicious testament to just how accessible Neapolitan home cooking can be while capturing the spirit of the people and the place.

EGGPLANT IN GARLIC SAUCE

A vegetable to serve as a separate course at room temperature. Serves 6

3 long thin eggplants, no larger than 6 ounces

About 12 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil Fine Salt

For the sauce

3 cloves garlic, peeled and finely chopped

1/4 cup red wine vinegar

2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil Salt and abundant freshly ground black pepper 20 large fresh mint leaves, torn into thirds

1. Cut the eggplants in half lengthwise. Use a paring knife to make a diamond pattern on each cut side, and sprinkle with a little fine salt.

2. Place 3 tablespoons of the oil in a skillet that has a lid and is large enough to hold the six eggplant halves in one layer, and set over medium heat. When the oil is hot, arrange the eggplants in the skillet with the cut sides down. Cover the skillet and sauté for 1 minute, adding a little more oil when the previous oil is completely absorbed by the eggplant and using a metal spatula to shift the eggplant halves so they do not stick to the skillet. Cover pan again, and repeat adding oil as needed, until the cut sides are golden and the eggplants are almost cooked through.

3. Turn the eggplant halves over, cover again, and cook until the rounded sides are completely soft, 4 minutes or more depending on the size of the eggplants. Transfer to a serving platter with the cut sides facing up.

4. Mix the garlic, vinegar and oil together; season with salt and abundant pepper, and add the mint leaves. Mix again then pour the sauce over the eggplant. Let rest for at least 15 minutes before serving. The eggplant may be prepared in advance and kept, covered, in the refrigerator. Remove from the refrigerator 1 hour before serving.

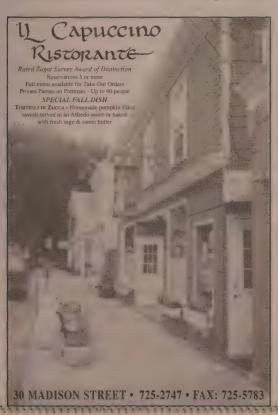

"POMMAROLA" ALLA NAPOLETANA

The classic Neapolitan tomato sauce Makes about 3 cups (enough for 1 pound vermicelli)

- 3 pounds ripe tomatoes, preferably San Marzano type plum tomatoes, cut into large
- 2 medium-sized carrots, scraped and cut into small pieces
- 2 large red onions, peeled
- 2 stalks celery, cut into small pieces
- 4 tablespoons unsalted butter instead of the traditional lard
- 1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
- Salt and abundant freshly ground black pepper 16 fresh basil leaves, torn into thirds
- 1. Place the tomatoes, carrots, one of the onions, coarsely chopped, and the celery, in a non-reactive casserole, preferably flameproof terra -cotta, over medium heat. Cover the casserole and cook for 25 minutes, mixing every so often with a wooden spoon to be sure nothing is sticking on the bottom.
- 2. Pass the contents of the casserole through a food mill into a crockery or glass bowl, using the disk with the smallest holes.
- 3. Finely chop the remaining onion and transfer the onion to the same casserole. Add the butter and olive oil. Set the casserole over medium heat and lightly sauté until the onion becomes translucent, about 5 minutes. Add the strained tomato mixture, season with salt and abundant pepper, then add the basil and simmer for at least 25 minutes more. The tomato sauce is now ready to be

Dining in the Hamptons

75 Main is a restaurant that adapts its persona according to the season and even to the time of day. It really is a chameleon showing one façade for breakfast or brunch, another on an evening at the height of the season, and still another on a recent Saturday night as we parked outside the entrance—a major difference from a summer Saturday! The windows glowed with soft lights while straw bales and other seasonal artifacts reinforced the sense of autumn in the air.

Sean Bruns joined as General Manager earlier this year and his enthusiasm showed as he told of the work that went on January through March to refurbish the restaurant. There's a great bar with comfortable couches forming informal seating areas for premeal drinks with dozens and dozens of candles on tables. There is a wonderful soft, sophisticated feeling in the room, making it easy to see why 75 Main has been voted one of the most romantic dining spots on Long Island.

We enjoyed a glass of an excellent Indaba 2002 South African Sauvignon Blanc as we studied the menu and talked with Shaun and one of his managers, Kerri. Dr. June Spirer is the owner of the restaurant and her love of wine is apparent in the exceptional and sensibly priced wine list that has earned the Wine Spectator Award of Excellence each year. Wine by the glass ranges from $6 to $9.50 and you can get a very drinkable bottle for under $25. There is something appropriate for every wallet and palate.

David Sunday, the executive chef, also joined 75 Main in February, so there really is a new team at work here. David is a Long Island native who has always loved to cook, spent time in the Army and, while serving in Korea, was personal chef to General Scott.

As it was off-season, David obliged our request for a quick tour of his immaculate kitchen. We saw the bread ovens where bread is baked every day and an incredible steamer that holds around 180 lobsters which is put into duty during the Wednesday Lobster Evenings in summer.

David's time in Korea is revealed in his cooking style, for he has a true appreciation of Oriental cuisine. Crab Rangoon featured wontons filled with crab meat, ginger, garlic and scallion cream cheese while the Thai spring rolls, served with a very good Nam

75 Main

75 Main Street Southampton 283-1940

Pla dipping sauce, were superb. We took Kerri's advice, to put the residual sauce on the accompanying salad, and were very glad that we did! Another appetizer was a delectable yellow fin tuna sashimi served on a bed of sea beans. For a totally different style of appetizer, the duck pate was smooth and delicate and served with great bread. Everything served in the restaurant is made on the premises.

Then we moved on to a four-cheese Agnolotti salad. Agnolotti is a form of pasta, similar to ravioli and typical of the Piedmont region of Italy, and David's version was excellent. The warm cheese filled pasta pockets, mingled with arugula in a zesty balsamic syrup with some Kalamata olives and Parmesan, really filled the mouth and senses with that very special taste of Italy. The homemade foccacia bread came into good play to ensure that all of the sauce was appropriately dealt with!

Entrees cover a commendable range, again to ensure that there is something to please almost everyone. We chose a couple of meat dishes. Lamb chops, because we love them and feel they are always a good test of a kitchen, and bison short ribs, because David enthused over them. The lamb chops were large, meaty, perfectly cooked, and succulent and the short ribs appropriately deep in taste. The accompanying spaghetti squash and sweet potato puree and asparagus all added to the feel of autumn and harvest time.

Desserts at 75 Main change each day and we had to sample the crepes served with fresh berries and cream. With some appropriately strong espresso, we ended a very pleasant and satisfying meal. As we dined, we had enjoyed the soft sounds of a steel drum playing and Shaun informed us that the "Island Boys" provide steel band music on Wednesdays and Sundays as a regular feature.

75 Main is open every day, throughout the year, serving breakfast, lunch or brunch and, in the late afternoon a cup of coffee and something light can always be found in the lounge area before dinner. Weekend evenings go on late in the night, with appropriate music. Wine dinners are regularly offered. Should you require off-premises catering, 75 Main will cater to your every need.

At dinner, appetizers range from $8 to $16; entrees from $14 to $32 and desserts from $6 to $8. The early evening prix fixe from 5 to 7.30 p.m., Monday through Sunday with a choice of three appetizers, five entrees and a dessert for $15.95 offers great value.

75 Main is an exceptionally good restaurant that really brings the total concept of hospitality to a very high level and is great for casual eating or that very special occasion. The combination of location, ambience, service and very good food is a great credit to the owner, management and all of the staff.

EALTH & BEAUTY

How To Minimize The Years In Minutes

Ever look in the mirror and wish you could make some changes? Maybe erase a few lines or wrinkles? But won't do it because you are nervous? Afraid of the cost, lengthy recuperation period or the possibility something may go horribly wrong and freeze your face in an expression of permanent surprise?

Well, fear no more. Today, there are many non-invasive cosmetic treatments that, when administered by a board certified surgeon, can do everything from eliminate crow's feet to brown spots, with minimal risk, cost and time. The American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery (AACS) reports that over 860,000 cosmetic surgery procedures were performed in 2002 and the most popular treatments were botox, microdermabrasion, and chemical peels. Even men are becoming increasingly more comfortable with cosmetic surgery treatments. Last year, over 150,000 throughout the U.S. underwent procedures.

Once the secret vanity of fading Hollywood divas who'd remain recluse for weeks while healing, cosmetic surgery procedures have now become mainstream. The acceptance may be attributed to the many newer, safer, and effective alternatives that are available. Dr. Alexander Covey, the surgical and medical director of East End Laser Care in Center Moriches and Southampton, finds that most of his non-invasive treatments take "less than an hour with little discomfort and provide immediate recognizable results." In fact, he says, "Often, the procedure will eliminate or postpone the need for a

His "Instant Rejuvenation Treatments" are for women and men who want to look and feel their best. These procedures can be easily scheduled into a patient's busy day and many choose to have them done on their lunch break.

Before any treatment, Dr. Covey personally performs a consultation. "People come in and say 'I want a lift...what can you do for me." Depending on the patient, he may prescribe botox in the lines between the eyes and crow's feet, collagen in the smile lines and to fill out the lips, followed by a laser procedure to make the skin shinier and to "tighten up" the face. It takes under an hour to have all the procedures done and, Dr. Covey reports "the patient can walk out looking much better and go right back to work."

While laser wrinkle reduction and botox are performed the most in Dr. Covey's practice, he offers a full-range of treatments including microdermabrasion, laser hair removal, laser treatment of acne and acne scars, Intense Pulsed Light (IPL) to remove brown spots and reduce redness from rosacea and broken capillaries, as well as CosmoDerm and CosmoPlast which are natural fillers to help lessen facial lines, among other procedures.

Dr. Covey was recently cited by Castle Connolly's 2003 Guide as one of the "Top Doctors in New York." He is board-certified in Cosmetic Surgery by the American Board of Laser Surgery, a fellow of the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery, and a member of the American Society for Dermatologic Surgery. If you would like to know more about the procedures discussed here, as well as other alternatives, consider attending his free seminar on "The Newest Treatments in Cosmetic Laser Surgery" at The Inn at East Wind located at 5720 Route 25A in Wading River on Tuesday, October 21st at 7:00p.m. Call (631) 287-6662 to register, or visit www.eastendlasercare.com, and learn how you can start looking as young as you feel.

FAITH & BEAUTY

Sweet Dreams

Over the last couple of months I have made my bed out of the front seat of my car, an attic floor, a couch in a bookstore and a dune on Flying Point Beach, but now that my semi-nomadic existence has come to an end it is time to think about more comfortable sleeping arrangements. A good night's sleep reduces stress, and seems to improve overall mental health.

If your evenings are starting to resemble the restless tossings of Bill Murray's Bob Harris in Lost in Translation, your mattress might be the place to start addressing your sleep habits. What works for one person, might not work for another. Whatever mattress you choose should have the right combination of comfort and support for you. Luckily there are a multitude of options when it comes to where you may lie. There are even mattresses that can adjust to the individual preferences of two sleepers in the same bed.

They use either water-tubes or air-mattress technology to achieve the separate adjustments. This is the answer to a common complaint among spouses and could possibly save a lot of marriages. Another popular mattress gimmick (excuse me, "feature") is a mattress made of space-age polymers, supposedly tested by NASA, that conform to your body and leave an imprint like Wiley Coyote in the bottom of a ravine. The mattress springs back to life when you get up, but later "remembers" your "contours." These mattresses are pricey and I find their health benefits to be debatable. To be honest, I'm not certain I want my bed to have a better memory than I do. I am not even going to discuss motorized beds that can adjust up and down, except to say that they make a nice companion to a bedpan and I.V.

When mattress shopping, you should know how to identify and avoid refurbished mattresses. Allow me to explain. You know those ads that boast, "We will even pick up your old mattress at no charge whatsoever." These companies are not simply mattress philanthropists. It is a common practice to refurbish an old mattress and entirely legal to sell it with no brand identification. As long as there is a new cover and fill, the seller is within the bounds of the law, but the frame and springs are old and slept on. Refurbished mattresses often sell quite cheaply (about $100), but appear new. The important thing is to get a comfortable and firm mattress. A slightly firmer mattress is more durable than soft ones and better for your spine.

Before you commit mattresscide (no, I am not talking about your mother) there are a few things you should know. Most people need about eight hours of sleep a night, but there is such a thing as too much sleep. Believe it or not nine or more hours of sleep a night can actually make you less alert the next day. According to the National Sleep Foundation most Americans are in no danger of getting too much sleep, our average is 6.9 hours a night.

A recent study showed that a good night's sleep might rescue memories from the day. This assumes, of course, that you want to remember your day. The study, by researchers from the University of Chicago, revealed that recall on facts learned during the day was better the next morning after a good night's sleep than it was at the end of the day. A separate study conducted by the Harvard Medical School showed that both recall and performance were improved by sleep. Evidence in these studies points to the fact that sleep helps to restore memory.

Recent studies indicate that it might not be the quantity of sleep that is most important, but the quality. You might want to spend some quality time with that buckwheat pillow that you threw in the closet last year, thinking it was another of your kid's useless gifts. In addition to making a mean Soba noodle, buckwheat conforms naturally to your body's individualized curves to cradle your neck and head, providing a more restful sleep. Just don't eat the pillow. "Last night I dreamt I ate a giant bowl of Udon and when I woke up my pillow was gone."

My initial attempts to work myself up into a druginduced coma having failed me, I turned over the remainder of my OxyContin and Valium cocktail to Rush Limbaugh. With my brand new mattress I stretched out and fell right into a deep slumber, not broken until the morning light filtered through the blinds and warmly awakened me. Even babies don't sleep this well.

Once you've installed a new mattress, gotten a pillow that promotes the correct cervical curve of your neck, and perhaps picked up a sleep mask, you'll be a sleep-fueled superhero. You might also want to chew some Valerian root, get plenty of exercise and see how you feel in couple of weeks. However, if all else fails remember the words of Bob Harris, "The good news is the whisky works."

Mum's The Word

Mums. Those reliable, sturdy perennials whose florets bloom into firm, determined clusters of color that define fall. Purple, persimmon, pink, burnished bronze, and gold, the last blasts of color before the inevitable first frost that stills the landscape and quiets the soul. These abundant plants liven the waning season and brighten the shortened days.

"They're boring," states a friend with a yawn.

"Grow too leggy," complains another.

"I can't stand them," pronounces still another before whispering with a shudder, "In Europe, they represent death."

Well, just try and snip at mums to a member of the National Chrysanthemum Society and chances are you will be cut down. Visit their site at www.mums.org and you will learn that this group of eminent green thumbs has recently concluded their 60th Annual Convention, appropriately titled: "The Frontier Spirit and Mums Brings Us Together." They are an amazing organization, not the least for having managed to hold sixty annual conventions since their inception in 1954. (You do the math).

Numbers aside, they are relentless in their devotion to "the propagation and cultivation of the chrysanthemum." Their national and local chapters host competitive shows where prized blossoms reign and are judged under presumably scrupulous criteria before being bestowed with appropriate prestigious acknowledgements.

To those that think mums, or "dendranthemas," are plain and mundane, the Society recognizes an impressive 13 classes each featuring distinctive composites of disc and ray florets that take different shapes, including: the regular incurve (looks sort of like a large pom-pom), decorative (your typical garden variety marigold-like mum), pompon (a petite pom-pom), anemone, spoon, quill, spider, brush and thistle, and the indefatigable, "unclassified" that resembles a floppy, lazy daisy, among others. Actually, it is the "compositae" or daisy from which the chrysanthemum "stems," if you pardon the pun.

For those naysayers who find the mum to be hohum...fertilize this. The chrysanthemum can be traced back to 15th century B.C., when the flower was cultivated as a Chinese herb thought to be

"Trick Or Treat"

It seems that Halloween is the one holiday that remains popular throughout the years. It doesn't matter how old you are, fun is the nature of this special day. Children look forward to trick-or-treating and adults love to dress up for parties.

Halloween conjures up thoughts of costumes, pumpkins, scary movies, and lots of treats. When it comes to decorating, there are limitless options; there is virtually every imaginable ornament on the market today.

Man-made spider webs can act as a translucent canvas for a backdrop of creepy crawlers on your front porch. Hang just a few, or many plastic spiders, to cover the entire surface. While spooky lighting can enhance the look of your Halloween theme, for safety reasons it's important to have adequate lighting.

We all love that ominous feel, but on Halloween take care to prevent injuries.

Fog machines are also a

Fog machines are also a great innovation that has become available in the past few years. They bring a theatrical feeling and add a bit of magic and creativity to the scene. Again, be safety-conscious and don't conceal steps in a fog bank. Next, to create spine tingling thrills, select some scary music. There are many sounds to choose from including themes from actual flicks. Music is a universal and symbolic art that sets the mood.

Another great tip for the exterior of the home is to put decorations in the front windows, selecting either a traditional carved pumpkin or a frightening silhouette. Use cardboard cutouts to make a quick and inexpensive silhouette. Place it in the window and backlight the room with colored light. Green, red and purple are great choices. You can also create gravestones for the front yard.

If you really want to get into the spirit of the holiday, answer the door wearing a full costume. Children love it. Confidentially, costumes have always been a sore spot for me. My mother enjoyed making mine. In kindergarten, I was a giant Planters Peanut. She bought tan-colored material, cut out the pattern, sewed it into the proper shape and stuffed the suit with newspaper. Did I mention that she hand-stitched actual peanuts on to the exterior of the costume? Brown tights and shoes finished off the ensemble. The following year, I was a chick hatching out of an egg.

"But mom, I want to be Cinderella," I cried. Permanent emotional scars, anyone? Now that I'm older, I appreciate her hard work and Halloween "labors of love," but back then it didn't go over too well. I did, however, win the costume contest several years in a row. Thanks mom!

Now, Halloween would not be complete without a spooky movie.

Here are the top ten scary movies, according to Blockbuster, that will frighten the heck out of you:

1.The Exorcist

2.Psycho

3.Rosemary's Baby

4. The Silence of the Lambs

5.Halloween

6.The Shining

Police Blotter

This week's local police reports were topped by a few odd, petty thefts; so petty it makes you wonder if unemployment effects more than just your job security. Local police also dealt with a few traffic-related issues.

Unemployment stinks, doesn't it? It must really stink for the 36-year-old Flanders man who was arrested at the Hampton Bays King Kullen last week. Police responded to a call from the store's manager who caught the suspect with a back pack containing 26 sticks of deodorant and a few odds and ends totalling $124.71. The man returned the items and was charged with petit larceny.

A three and a half horse-power outboard engine galloped away from a Terry Road residence this past Saturday. The East Hampton home owner told police that sometime within the past month someone unknown could have walked up from the beach and removed the $600 motor from his backyard. No footprints were evident upon investigation.

Due to some of the highest gas prices the U.S. has ever seen, two delinquents probably didn't get more than a mile from the station after they pumped $12.11 of regular. The Flanders Road gas station attendant that witnessed this unemployment-driven crime called police who, without a plate number or helpful description, were unable to track the suspects down.

The Springs General Store in East Hampton was almost the victim of a successful petty theft this week. A would-be thief was seen trying to make off with $10.25 in cigarettes and beverages, but was stopped at the door by the owner. He was hit by the suspect but was able to hold him on the ground and call police.

An unknown, antagonistic arborist is responsible for $400 in property damage at an Old Montauk Highway home in Montauk. The owner of the property was horrified to find eight of her pine trees sawed off at the stump. She told police it could have happened anytime between mid September and last Saturday. Police were unable to verify the age of the pines, noting that the rings inside were mangled beyond recognition.

A man who writes for Dan's Papers in Bridgehampton will be arraigned next Friday in Southampton Town Court. Police have charged him with making way too many bad jokes in one column of newsprint.

I thought high school kids didn't want to be at school... A teen was was arrested at the East Hampton High school last week because, according to school security and local police, he was told he wasn't allowed on school property. He was arrested on charges of criminal trespass in the second degree when police saw his vehicle leaving the school's parking lot.

As a bonus there is the The Flesh Eaters – filmed in Montauk in 1964. Dan Rattiner assisted on this film.

Here's a timeless treat that will perk up any party:

Caramel Apples

Makes 10 Caramel Apples

80 Caramel cubes (any brand you prefer)

2 tablespoons of water

10 wooden sticks

Wax paper

Preparation

Wash and dry apples thoroughly. Remove stems and insert sticks in the apple.

In a medium size saucepan, over low heat, melt the caramels with the water, stirring constantly until smooth. Now dip the apple completely. Place on greased wax paper.

Store your caramel apples in the refrigerator.

Before serving, remove them from the refrigerator and allow them to stand for about fifteen minutes.

Don't forget that SAFETY is very important, especially during Halloween.

Here are three tips to always remember:

1.Make sure young children are accompanied by an adult or responsible teenager when they go doorto-door.

2. If your children are old enough to go out on their own, have them trick-or-treat in your neighborhood and stay in well lit areas.

3.Instruct your children never to eat anything until they are home and the treats have been carefully examined. Dispose of anything unwrapped.

imbued with the power of life. In 8th century A.D., the Japanese featured the mum in the crest of the Emperor and ordained the "Imperial Order of the Chrysanthemum" which is the highest Order of Chivalry.

Today, in Europe, it is known as the "flower of death" and placed on graves. However, in the United States, mum is just another word for "fall" and its noble bloom can be found sprouting along roadsides, in nurseries, at florists and gardening centers.

"They add cheer to a fading garden," says Tsuyumi Aikawa, an avid local gardener.

"We're selling lots of them," confirms Jeanine Miedzwiecki, co-owner of Montauk Garden Center, delivering assurance that every mum has its day.

Typically purchased in groups of three or four pots, mums require lots of sun, preferably morning. They should be planted before the first frost in an area that provides good air circulation and drainage.

Now, to thwart complaints of perennial legginess, once the mum is in the soil, water weekly and cut off deadheads. After the frost, let nature take its course.

"One undesirable influence is the presence of a street or other light source at night...night light serves to delay the bloom date," cautions the Chrysanthemum Society's "Beginner's Handbook" which can be purchased on their site.

Proving that no one can be "mum" on mums and you reap what you sow, check out Dan Langevin. He is the author of "Growing and Marketing of Fall Mums" which is directed at amateur gardeners and promotes the idea that planting and selling mums in your own backyard is akin to growing money. Dan makes it seem really easy and assures that "no other crop will yield as much profit with as little expense in so short a time or so small an area." He has written over 200 pages on the subject. "It is the only book of its kind," declares the back cover.

Of that, I have no doubt.
